Overview & Current Events

Tapestry Inc. (TPR) was founded in 2017 as a transformation from Coach IP Holdings LLC (founded in 1941) and is a leading American multinational luxury fashion holding company. The company is based in New York and is the parent company of three brands: Coach, Kate Spade, and Stuart Weitzman. The company's renaming came after Coach acquired Stuart Weitzman and Kate Spade and expanded from making Coach-brand handbags to producing a wider variety of products through their three primary brands. These products include various leather goods, footwear, accessories, clothes, fragrances, and jewelry. Tapestry has a market capitalization of approximately $9.97 billion, over 20,000 employees, and $5.7 billion in annual revenue. Coach continues to make up 70% of company sales, Kate Spade represents about a quarter of sales, and Stuart Weitzman is a small but growing segment in the overall business. The company sells products worldwide from its 1,500+ branded retail locations, brand websites, and through thousands of distributor retail locations.

Tapestry reported third-quarter results for Fiscal Year (FY)2023 on May 11th, 2023. The company ends its fiscal year at the end of June. The company achieved a revenue growth of 5% on a reported basis or 9% on a constant currency basis, demonstrating growth across its brands. This expansion in revenue was accompanied by an improvement in operating margin compared to the previous year, driven by a significant increase of 290 basis points in gross margin. Furthermore, the company exceeded expectations by increasing diluted earnings per share by over 50% to $0.78. Net sales for the period reached $1.51 billion, a 5% increase compared to the prior year. Operating income amounted to $226 million, resulting in an operating margin of 15.0%. However, the operating margin was negatively affected by an approximate 170 basis point from foreign exchange headwind. In comparison, the reported operating income and operating margin in the previous year were $169 million and 11.8% respectively. On a non-GAAP basis, the prior year's operating income was $176 million with an operating margin of 12.2%. Net income for the period reached $187 million, with earnings per diluted share amounting to $0.78. This represents a significant increase compared to the reported net income of $123 million and earnings per diluted share of $0.46 in the same period of the prior year. On a non-GAAP basis, the prior year's net income was $136 million, with earnings per diluted share of $0.51.

The company provided the FY2023 outlook in the report. Tapestry's management team expects the company to make $6.7 billion in sales and earn between $3.85 - $3.90, representing nearly 12.1% growth versus the prior year fiscal year of 2022.

grow 5.0% for the next five years. Still, the outcome is highly dependent on Tapestry's ability to maintain margins and sustain at least mild topline growth.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	Now	2028
Avg. P/E	14.9	16.2	19.4	17.4	18.3	17.4	15.2	13.7	14.6	8.9	11.1	13.0
Avg. Yld.	2.2%	2.7%	3.6%	3.9%	3.4%	3.0%	3.5%	0.0%	0.0%	3.3%	2.7%	2.3%

Over the past decade, Tapestry has averaged a P/E ratio of 15.6. However, the company consisted entirely of the Coach brand and enjoyed higher returns on invested capital for most of that period. With slowing sales and declining margins in a competitive environment of online competition and slower global growth, we consider a P/E ratio of 13.0x to be fair until the company can demonstrate a resumption of growth and stabilized margins. The company has a tailwind of 3.3% valuation multiple towards the mean of a P/E ratio of 13.0x. Thus, the stock looks to be undervalued at the current price.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2028
Payout	33.3%	43.5%	70.3%	68.2%	62.8%	51.3%	52.5%	105%	33.9%	28.8%	31%	29%

Tapestry's luxury brands, especially Coach, give the company at least a small economic moat. This is evidenced by its historically high returns on invested capital and considerable market outperformance since Coach went public in the early 2000s. However, the company's returns on invested capital have been declining in recent years, indicating a cyclical deterioration in brand strength as online retail puts margin pressure on all physical retailers. Overall, their investment returns and profitability remain above average but diminishing. The ongoing trade dispute between the United States and China puts further pressure on Tapestry, as a small portion of its products is made in China, but a significant amount of its sales is earned from China. Tapestry currently has a BBB- credit rating, which puts them on the low side of investment grade. The company's balance has gotten better, with a Debt/Equity ratio of 1.4. Still, the inconsistency of their earnings and the company's economic vulnerability appears to drive lower overall credit quality from the rating agencies. The security does not necessarily offer the growth or stability that many retirees rely on. The company did remain highly profitable during the previous two recessions as the primary Coach brand, but the expanded Tapestry company is untested by a downturn in its current form.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Tapestry has decent brands but faces stiff competition, global tariff uncertainty, and diminishing profitability. The good news is that Tapestry is the manufacturer of its products, rather than just a middleman, and has various online platforms from which to grow. We expect 10.6% per annum returns from Tapestry as a baseline case, but the actual result is expected to be highly variable. Overall, business uncertainty remains high. However, we consider Tapestry a buy after its recent price came down since last report.
