West Fraser Timber has delivered exceptional results over the past decade and has increased the EPS by a significant CAGR of 30.4% over the past nine years and 27.9% in the past five years. Lumber and OSB demand are significantly influenced by changes in new home construction activity in the United States. Housing starts for 2022 decreased by 3% to 1.55 million units compared to 1.60 million units in 2021. In addition, rising interest rates and elevated housing prices affect housing affordability, potentially reducing near-term demand for new home construction and decreasing demand for the company's wood-building products. The near-term headwinds are reflected in the company's recent quarterly result and our estimate of a full-year EPS of $0.50 in 2023. Although the company is facing headwinds in the near term, we believe the low supply of existing homes for sale, the backlog of new homes under construction, and changes in homeownership trends resulting from the COVID-19 pandemic is expected to provide offsetting factors that will support long-term demand for home construction activity. WFG is a highly cyclical stock, and even though the company might be in the mid-term cycle, its earnings can bounce back to their previous levels from 2024 onwards. For estimating WFG's fair value for the next five years, we used the Earnings Power Value (EPV) method since it is more representative of the company's value due to non-recurring events that negatively affected the company's earnings in 2023. Thus, our EPS estimate for WFG stands at $1.01 and $7.64 for 2023 and 2028, respectively. Lastly, we expect that the DPS will maintain its increasing trend with a CAGR of 5.0% through 2028, considering that the company has grown its dividends over the past nine and five years at a healthy CAGR of 27.4% and 34.6%, respectively.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2028
Avg. P/E	22.6	18.7	51.5	11.1	8.2	8.1	-19.3	4.4	2.8	4.0	78.6	12.0

WFG is a cyclical business, so earnings are sensitive to macro-environment changes, which are expected to worsen going forward. We believe the current valuation is elevated, although it reflects the earnings growth potential of the company. For 2028, we have used a P/E ratio of 12.0 which we believe would be a fair reflection of the company's business, resulting in a five-year target price of $85.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

WFG maintains a strong balance sheet and liquidity profile, enabling the company to execute a balanced capital allocation strategy. The company has ample liquidity with an outstanding cash and short-term investments balance of $994 million as of Q2 2023. The management is committed to providing a sustainable dividend return which remains a key priority within West Fraser's capital allocation strategy. Finally, the company has repurchased nearly 39.7 million of its common shares since early 2021.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

The lumber business will likely face difficulties in the following months as we approach the end of the year. West Fraser will likely see reduced demand due to home affordability in the near future, persistent labor shortages, and rate hikes from central banks, all of which will pressure its revenues and profitability. WFG has increased in value recently, and we consider this a reasonable exit point for investors to book profits and sell the stock. Therefore, the sell rating on the stock is premised upon the 4.5% annualized total returns for the medium-term, derived from our growth estimates, the dividend yield of 1.5%, and a valuation headwind.
