Overview & Current Events

Brandywine Realty Trust (BDN) is a real estate investment trust (REIT) that owns, develops, leases and manages an urban town center and transit-oriented portfolio which includes 162 properties in Philadelphia, Austin and Washington, D.C. The REIT has a market capitalization of $727 million and generates 75% of its operating income in Philadelphia, 19% of its operating income in Austin and the remaining 6% in Washington, D.C.

As Brandywine Realty Trust generates the vast portion of its operating income in Philadelphia and Austin, it is worth noting the advantages of these two areas. According to official reports, Philadelphia has the highest growth rate of highly educated citizens since 2008 while Austin is the fastest-growing metropolitan area, the best place to start business and it has retrieved all the jobs lost due to the pandemic.

In late October, Brandywine Realty Trust reported (10/24/23) financial results for the third quarter of fiscal 2023. Its occupancy fell sequentially from 89.4% to 88.3% and its funds from operations (FFO) per share remained flat at $0.29. It was the fourth consecutive quarter in which the impact of high interest rates on interest expense was evident. Interest expense jumped 43% over last year's quarter. As the REIT faces debt maturities, it has to issue new debt at high interest rates. Due to this headwind and its high debt load, the stock has plunged -71% off its peak in 2022, to a 13-year low. The REIT narrowed its guidance for FFO per share in 2023 from $1.14-$1.18 to $1.15-$1.17.

Brandywine Realty Trust operates primarily in Philadelphia and Austin, which have some attractive characteristics. 80% of all U.S. pharmaceutical companies have offices in Philadelphia, with no other county producing as many degrees in biomedical engineering. Moreover, Austin is the fastest-growing metropolitan area in the U.S., with Oracle and Tesla recently moving their headquarters to Austin. Up to 50 companies may move to Austin to service Tesla and its supply chain vendors. Overall, the outlook is bright for those who operate commercial properties in the area. On the other hand, Brandywine Realty Trust has posted flat FFO per share over the last decade, with a volatile performance record in place. It is also hurt by high interest expense due to high interest rates. We thus prefer to be conservative in our growth assumptions and assume that the REIT will grow its FFO per share at a 2.0% average annual rate over the next five years.

Brandywine Realty Trust (BDN)

Updated October 25th, 2023 by Aristofanis Papadatos

Brandywine Realty Trust is currently trading at a 10-year low price-to-FFO ratio of 3.6, which is much lower than the 10-year average FFO multiple of 10.7. Due to the high debt load of the REIT and its resultant vulnerability to high interest rates, we assume a fair price-to-FFO ratio of 8.4, which is the 3-year average of the stock. If the stock trades at its fair valuation level in five years, it will enjoy an 18.3% annualized gain in its returns.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2028
Payout	44%	44%	41%	66%	51%	53%	53%	54%	55%	56%	52%	47%

Brandywine Realty Trust recently cut its dividend by 21% due to the impact of high interest rates on its interest expense but it is still offering an exceptionally high dividend yield of 14.3%. Given the decent payout ratio of 52%, the dividend looks enticing on the surface. However, it is important to note that the REIT operates with a nosebleed leverage ratio (Net Debt to EBITDA) of 7.6. It also has a debt maturity in October-2024 and another one in June-2026. As a result, the dividend is likely to come under pressure in the event of an unforeseen downturn. The high debt load is the primary reason behind the freeze of the dividend for 19 consecutive quarters (before the recent cut). Moreover, Brandywine Realty Trust is sensitive to recessions due to its weak balance sheet and the sensitivity of its tenants to recessions. While the REIT has performed decently during the pandemic, with just a -4% decline in FFO per share between 2019 and 2021, we believe that the REIT is not suitable for risk-averse income-oriented investors.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Brandywine Realty Trust operates in the attractive markets of Philadelphia and Austin but it has exhibited choppy performance over the last decade and it is currently facing a strong headwind due to rising interest expense amid rising interest rates. As a result, during the last five years, the stock has dramatically underperformed the S&P 500 (-73% vs. +60%). We consider a consistent growth record as paramount and hence we are concerned over the unreliable performance of the REIT. Thanks to its depressed price, the stock could offer a 26.8% average annual return over the next five years thanks to 2.0% annual growth of FFO per share, a 14.3% dividend and an 18.3% annualized valuation tailwind. We rate the stock as a buy but we note its high debt load and its risk in the event of a recession.
