PulteGroup has grown its earnings per share strongly in the last five years, at a 5-year average annual growth rate of 38%. Even dating back from 2013 to 2022, PHM has grown earnings at a nearly 25% average annual growth rate.

The housing market which PulteGroup operates is still hot, as demand is high, and the supply is limited. PHM has many brands which allow them to sell to a variety of clientele interested in purchasing housing. The company has a backlog of home orders to construct, and the cancelation rate is slowing down, at 15% in the third quarter of 2023 compared to 24% in the third quarter of 2022.

The increasing average sale price continues to add to the company's earnings growth. Finally, the company's share count has been reduced by more than 5% annually over the last nine years, which significantly increases the earnings-per-share as earnings are spread across fewer outstanding shares. We estimate the company's earnings-per-share will eke out 3% growth from this relative high point into 2028. The increase in interest rates and resultant mortgage rates heavily impacted new order levels and cancellations in the first quarter, but Q2 and Q3 showed that demand for housing is still very strong, bolstered by population growth.

The corporation's dividend has grown by 11% on average over the past five years, and we estimate it will grow at around 5% in the next five years.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	Now	2028
Avg. P/E	12.7	15.4	14.9	11.3	11.3	8.4	9.0	7.5	8.8	5.1	6.2	8.0
Avg. Yld.	0.8%	1.2%	1.6%	1.9%	1.4%	1.3%	1.4%	1.3%	1.0%	1.3%	0.9%	0.8%

Pulte's price-to-earnings multiple is undervalued today at 6.2 based on 2023 forecasted earnings, implying the potential for a valuation tailwind. PHM is not an income stock with its yield of 0.9%, and we expect the yield to remain around here as the company prefers to repurchase shares and invest in the business.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2028
Payout	10%	18%	24%	22%	16%	11%	12%	10%	8%	5%	6%	6%

The payout ratio remains exceptionally low so the dividend is safe and should continue to grow in the years to come at roughly the rate of earnings. However, PulteGroup is more interested in investing for growth than it is in becoming an income stock. PulteGroup is not recession resistant and was clobbered in the Great Financial Crisis. In fact, the corporation reported higher net income per share in 2005 than it did in 2020. From 2007 to 2011, the company reported net losses and slashed its dividend to zero. While the company is benefiting from strong demand today, interest rates and housing demand can cause volatile earnings in a recession. We don't see any significant competitive advantage over its peers, but we like the fact that PHM has different banners catering to a variety of client types.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

We see PulteGroup as a strong company in the homebuilding market, and PHM is forecasted to generate 9.3% in total annual returns over the next five years, comprised of the 0.9% starting yield, 3% EPS growth, and a potential valuation tailwind. We are reiterating our hold rating on PulteGroup.
