Overview & Current Events

1st Source was founded in 1863 and since that time has grown into a regional bank with about $8 billion in total assets. The company is headquartered in Indiana and has about 100 locations to service its customers. 1st Source's market capitalization is $1.1 billion, and it is expected to produce about $365 million in revenue this year. 1st Source also has an exceptional dividend increase streak that stands at 36 years, which very few banks can match.

1st Source posted third quarter earnings on October 19th, 2023, and results were better than expected on both the top and bottom lines, and by fairly wide margins. Earnings-per-share came to $1.32, which was an impressive 22 cents ahead of expectations. Revenue was $94 million, up three percent year-over-year, and beating estimates by more than $4 million.

Average loans and leases were up $105 million, or 1.7%, from the second quarter, and up 11%, or $618 million, from the year-ago period. Growth was primarily from commercial real estate, construction equipment, and auto and light truck portfolios. Deposits were $6.95 billion, on average, during the quarter, which was up fractionally from Q2, but 4.2% higher year-over-year.

Net interest margin was 3.45%, a decline of two basis points from the prior quarter, but down 14 basis points from last year's Q3. Net income was $33 million, up fractionally from last year's Q3.

The company repurchased 260,887 shares for a total cost of $10.3 million. In addition, the company boosted its dividend by two cents per share, to a new annualized payout of $1.36 per share. We now see $4.85 in earnings-per-share for this year after Q3 results.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

Earnings-per-share growth has been robust since the bottom in 2009. Recent growth has been fueled by gains in the company's asset base, averaging 5%+ in the past decade. 1st Source's strong balance sheet growth has been accompanied by expanding margins at times and prudent operating expenditures, allowing for a rise in returns on its asset base. We're reiterating our estimate of earnings contraction (not growth) of 3% going forward, as the bank continues to struggle in producing earnings expansion in recent quarters. 1st Source is trying to build more fee revenue, but its business is still heavily dependent upon lending margins, and we think growth will be tough to come by because of the unfavorable interest rate environment with respect to deposit costs against lending rates. We now see roughly equivalent earnings for 2023 as we did in 2022.

1st Source Corp. (SRCE)

Updated October 22nd, 2023, by Josh Arnold

Our expectation for the dividend is now $1.50 in 2028 as we see 1st Source facing headwinds in its ability to grow earnings. However, we don't expect the bank to end its very long streak of dividend increases. We see the bank as being hesitant to boost its payout ratio much higher than it is at the moment.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	Now	2028
Avg. P/E	11.8	12.8	13.9	15.3	18.4	16.4	13.1	11.2	9.9	11.0	9.1	11.0
Avg. Yld.	2.6%	2.3%	2.2%	2.1%	1.6%	1.9%	2.4%	3.1%	2.6%	2.4%	3.1%	3.3%

1st Source's price-to-earnings multiple has been steady, all things considered, for the past decade. It is trading for 9.1 times earnings currently, which is well below our estimate of fair value. Therefore, we see a 3.9% tailwind to total returns from the valuation in the coming years. The yield should remain near 3% for the foreseeable future.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2028
Payout	31%	30%	32%	34%	30%	30%	31%	35%	26%	26%	28%	36%

The payout ratio is around one-quarter of earnings and dividend raises will likely be somewhat modest in the coming years. We see the dividend as safe and with a lot of room to grow given 1st Source's commitment to raising the payout, as well as the low payout ratio. We see the payout growing even if 1st Source is not able to produce strong earnings growth, and indeed, that is what we're forecasting.

1st Source's competitive advantage is in its clean balance sheet, strong profitability metrics and robust market position in the areas it serves. The advantage of a community or regional bank is that it can generate sizable market share in lots of small markets, creating a sustainable competitive advantage. It is obviously not immune from recessions but did perform well in 2020, all things considered.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

We believe total returns for 1st Source investors could be 3.8% annually, consisting of the current 3.1% yield, a meaningful tailwind from the valuation and 3% earnings contraction. Given that the bank's growth outlook is poor, and the fact that it has struggled to grow loans and leases organically, we think this will keep a lid on growth. We see slightly better prospective total returns as sufficient cause to boost our rating from sell to hold after Q3 results.
