Overview & Current Events

CME Group is a Chicago-based company that operates futures and derivatives exchanges based on interest rates, equities, currencies, and commodities. The company was founded in 1898 but didn't IPO until 2002. Since then, CME Group has pursued industry consolidation through mergers (CBOT Holdings) and acquisitions (Nymex Holdings).

On October 25, 2023, the company reported its third-quarter financial results for 2023. The revenue for this quarter was reported as $1.3 billion, with earnings per share (EPS) of $2.25, surpassing the consensus estimate of $2.21 per share. This EPS figure indicated an improvement from the $1.98 per share reported a year earlier. Moreover, the revenue figure of $1.34 billion for the quarter ended September 2023 represented a year-over-year increase of 9%.

Growth On A Per-Share Basis

Year	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2028

Looking ahead we anticipate 5.2% average annual earnings per share growth over the next half decade. The main tailwind for the company is volatility in the public markets for the foreseeable future as there remains enormous uncertainty on how various trade, geopolitical, global growth, and interest rate scenarios will play out to direct the near-term future of the American and global economies.

Additionally, we expect CME to harvest significant synergies from its acquisition of Nymex Holdings, as their product offerings overlap nicely and enhance the overall competitive positioning of the firm. Finally, we see the company's extensive network and large volume enabling it to drive growth through starting ancillary services and exchange products, as well as sell order flow data to third parties. As a result, we expect CME Group to continue growing earnings-per-share at a slow but steady clip for the foreseeable future.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	Now	2028
Avg. P/E	18.3	17.6	23.3	24.2	19.6	9.7	25.6	24.7	32.8	21.8	23.1	20.0
Avg. Yld.	3.40%	3.20%	2.30%	2.20%	1.10%	5.10%	1.70%	2.00%	1.70%	2.3%	2.1%	4.0%

CME Group's average price to earnings multiple of over the past decade is roughly in-line with where it is today, with the stock currently trading at 23.1 times expected 2023 earnings. We believe that, while the market is experiencing near term expectations of continued increases in volatility to drive growth in earnings, over the next several years growth will slow considerably. As a result, we are maintaining our fair value estimate of 20x earnings and believe the stock is slightly overvalued at present.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2028
Payout	62%	56%	54%	53%	22%	49%	44%	51%	54%	50%	48%	79%

CME Group's biggest competitive advantage is its network effect as a consolidator in the financial exchange space. Thanks to its large volume, it offers customers considerable liquidity, which is an extremely attractive feature for this industry. The company's large volume also gives it economies of scale, enabling it to offer competitive pricing without considerably hurting profitability. This not only enables the company to retain customers, but also attracts new ones. As its customer count grows, its network effect only grows stronger, which in turn drives further liquidity and cost advantages, resulting in a virtuous cycle. Given that more than half of all interest rate-related futures in the world and nearly all North American interest rate-related futures are traded on the company's exchanges, it is clear that the company has established a dominant network effect in its core business.

While the company is not directly impacted by changes in stock market valuations, it did suffer during the last recession due to depressed market sentiment and customer bankruptcies, dramatically reducing activity on the exchanges. From peak to trough, CME Group's trailing twelve-month earnings per share fell from ~$3.45 in mid-2008 to $2.40 in mid-2009. The biggest long-term risk to the company is the potential for new regulation to disrupt the company's business model, which could break up its exchange and clearing operations or even limit the volatility on the exchanges or its pricing power. However, we do not see any threat developing in the near future, making the business fairly low-risk from a long-term perspective.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

CME Group benefits from increased volatility. Given the increasing geo-political and macroeconomic uncertainties in the world today, this could bode well for the business. At the same time, the valuation currently stands at a slight premium. As a result, with a 3.7% expected annualized return over the next half decade, we rate shares as a Hold.
