Overview & Current Events

Exchange Income Corporation engages in aerospace and aviation services by offering scheduled airline and charter services, emergency medical services, after-market aircraft & engines, and pilot flight training services. Additionally, the company is invested in manufacturing window wall systems used in skyscrapers, vessels, and other industrial purposes. Finally, Exchange Income also owns telecom towers, which it leases to America's and Canada's major telecom providers. The company generates just over $1 billion in annual revenue, is based in Winnipeg, Canada, and aims to pay out the majority of its earnings through monthly dividends while it grows through acquisitions. All numbers in this report have been converted into US dollars, unless specified otherwise.

On November 9th, 2023, Exchange Income raised its dividend by 5% to an annualized rate of C$2.64. It implies a rate of $1.91 at current FX rates.

On the same day, the company reported its Q3 results for the period ending September 30th, 2023. Revenues increased by 17% (in constant currency) to a record high of $506.3 million. The increase in revenues was driven both by the aerospace and aviation and manufacturing segments, whose revenues grew by 14.1% and 21.7%, respectively. The improvements were driven by strong demand across the board and the company's acquisitions over the past four quarters.

Earnings-per-share for the quarter was $0.73, down about 12% on an FX-neutral basis. The earnings decline was driven by higher interest costs due to rising rates and a higher share count driven by shares issued to fund last year's acquisitions. For fiscal 2023, management maintained their guidance, projecting a new all-time high adjusted EBITDA of between C$540 million and C$570 million. Based on this, we estimate earnings-per-share of $2.30, excluding any extraordinary items. All other entries in our tables depict GAAP figures.

Exchange Income pays dividends on a monthly basis. In its original Toronto listing, the company has never cut its payouts since initiating it in 2004, growing them whenever management sees fit. In its TSX listing, its monthly dividend has grown from C$0.10 in 2005 to C$0.22, as of today, including the company paying a C$0.19 monthly dividend for 33 consecutive months between 2019 and 2022. However, American investors have experienced a weaker growth rate due to the depreciation of the C$ against the USD. We have set our estimated adjusted EPS growth at 3% in the medium-term, given that the company's recovery from COVID-19 has already taken place. We also estimate DPS growth of around 2% through 2028, which makes for a prudent estimate considering that management's top priority includes adequate dividend coverage.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	Now	2028
Avg. P/E	---	---	10.8	12.7	12.1	11.8	9.9	---	17.5	16.4	14.5	12.5
Avg. Yld.	5.9%	7.9%	7.3%	7.4%	5.9%	6.8%	5.6%	5.6%	5.5%	5.4%	5.7%	6.3%

Exchange Income shares have retained a relatively moderate valuation multiple throughout the years, as its operations mainly involve investing in other businesses (a holding company). The stock has mostly traded based on its yield, which has averaged close to 6.3%. Following the recent market action, Exchange Income is now yielding 5.7% and trades at 14.5 times our expected earnings. A future P/E compression is possible as investors should demand a higher yield in a rising-rates landscape. Thus, we forecast valuation headwinds ahead.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2028
Payout	395%	456%	111%	91%	90%	96%	86%	284%	123%	89%	83%	79%

At the beginning of the decade, the company had an artificially high payout ratio, mostly attributed to accounting reasons amid its serial acquisitions. And while the dividend appears to lack coverage in some years (2020 and 2021,) this is due to the company's GAAP figures, including some non-cash items due to its constant acquisitions that affect results. The dividend has historically been covered from a free-cash flow per share or adjusted earnings-per-share point of view, hence the 16 increases over the past 19 years (in CAD terms). Additionally, while the company's businesses, such as aviation and manufacturing, are very recession-sensitive and subject to brutal competition, they are usually powered by multi-year contracts in the case of Exchange Income, resulting in a bit more stable revenues. Further, the company's cargo segment is seeing increased volumes amid growing e-commerce sales. Hence, revenues remained relatively robust during the pandemic compared to the other (mostly passenger-focused) aviation businesses.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Exchange Income's goal, as its name suggests, is to provide sustainable and growing income to its shareholders. While U.S. investors may be subject to currency fluctuations, the CAD/USD rate is not as volatile as most currencies. We forecast annualized returns of around 5.4% through 2028, primarily powered by the 5.7% yield and our growth estimates, offset by the possibility of a 2.9% annual valuation headwind. For conservative investors looking for a reliable stream of income, Exchange Income could be an attractive non-U.S. option. Shares earn a hold rating.
