Overview & Current Events

Invesco Ltd. is an investment management firm with assets under management of approximately $1.5 trillion. The company serves retail, institutional, and wealth management customers around the world. Invesco was founded in 1935, and the company is headquartered in Atlanta, GA.

Invesco Ltd. reported its third quarter earnings results on October 24. The company was able to generate revenues of $1.44 billion during the quarter, which was down 1% compared to the prior year's period. Invesco's assets under management did decline by 3% over the last quarter, ending at $1.49 trillion, which can be explained by the market drop towards the end of the third quarter, which lowered the value of the assets that Invesco manages. Invesco generated some inflows during the quarter, at $2.6 billion, which was better compared to the previous quarter. Invesco managed to generate an operating margin of 28% during the quarter, which was flat sequentially.

Invesco generated earnings-per-share of $0.35 during the third quarter, which was above the previous quarter's level. Earnings-per-share were up by 3% versus the previous year's quarter, as the company was able to avoid margin pressures during the period. Invesco generated very strong results in 2021, but 2022 was a way less profitable year for the company. Profits will decline this year, based on current estimates.

Invesco has compounded its adjusted earnings-per-share at a rate 9% per year between 2008 and 2019. Growth started to stall in 2014, however, and the company has not managed to grow its profits meaningfully since then.

Through assets under management growth, Invesco was able to grow its revenues in the past, but more recently assets under management did not grow much, backing out the Oppenheimer Funds acquisition. Invesco had to battle with net outflows during some quarters, due to rising competition. The OF acquisition has boosted Invesco's assets under management, and Invesco has stated it has already captured synergies of more than $500 million on a forward basis, which should help drive the company's margins over the coming years. Invesco expects that cost synergies alone will result in a $0.60+ annual tailwind to its earnings-per-share, which is why the earnings outlook for the current year is quite solid, despite some industry headwinds such as margin compression.

Through share buybacks, Invesco can positively impact its earnings-per-share growth as well. Invesco's current $1.2 billion share repurchase program will allow the company to reduce its share count significantly over the coming years. We believe that the share issuance for the OF acquisition will only result in a temporary uptick in Invesco's share count that will be balanced out by buybacks over the years. ETF investing will remain a headwind, which is why we believe that growth will slow down to the low-single-digits in the long run, which is substantially lower than the historic growth rate.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	Now	2028
Avg. P/E	15.0	14.9	16.2	14.4	12.2	7.0	7.1	8.7	7.6	10.7	9.0	10.0
Avg. Yld.	2.7%	2.6%	2.9%	3.8%	3.4%	7.0%	6.9%	4.6%	2.9%	4.2%	6.2%	5.7%

Invesco's shares trade at just 9 times our earnings-per-share estimate for 2023 right now, which is an inexpensive valuation compared to how Invesco's shares were trading through 2017. Shares were trading at a mid-teens price-to-earnings multiple for a long time, but we believe that multiple expansion towards that level is unlikely going forward. The fact that Invesco's earnings-per-share growth rate will be lower during the coming years, compared to how quickly the company grew in the past, leads us to believe that a future fair price to earnings multiple for Invesco will be well below the teens range seen prior to 2018. Shares trade slightly below our fair value estimate today.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2028
Payout	40.5%	39.0%	46.9%	54.4%	41.8%	49.0%	48.2%	40.2%	21.7%	44.6%	55.2%	56.5%

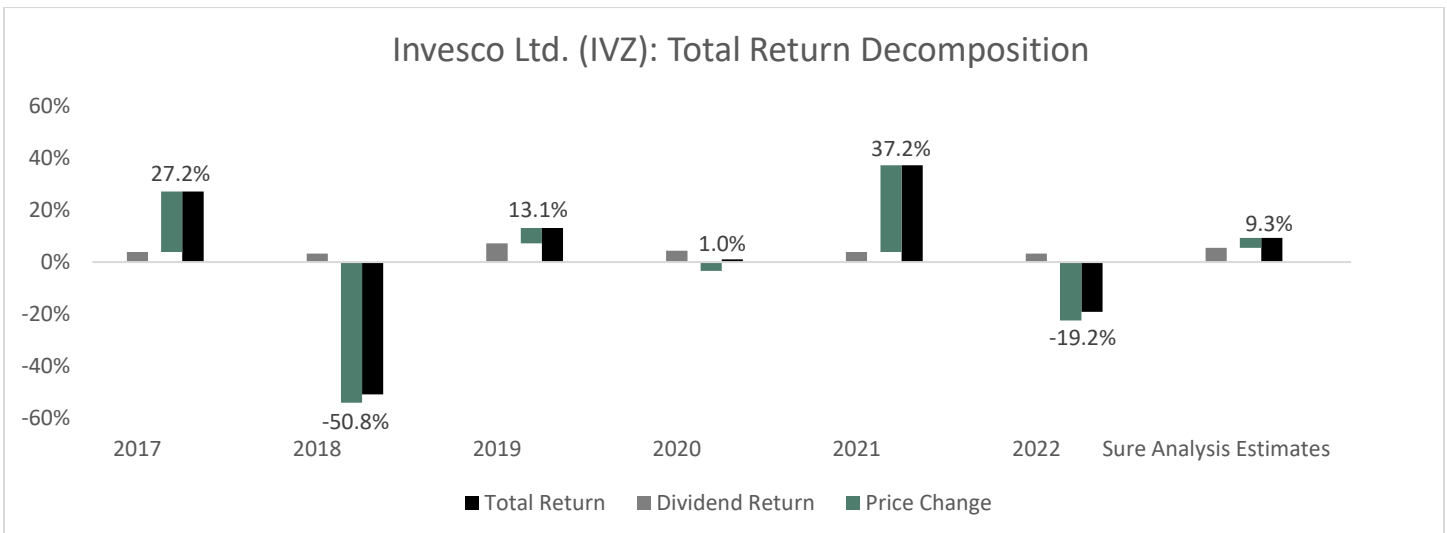

Invesco's dividend payout ratio peaked in the mid-50s in 2009 and 2016. Without a dividend cut, the payout ratio would have increased to a high level during 2020, but the 50% cut during the pandemic means that Invesco should be able to easily cover its dividend payments going forward. We do not think that there is a high risk for another dividend cut.

Invesco's brand and strong financial position provide it with a durable advantage in the highly competitive asset management industry. Invesco's strong credit rating, coupled with a compelling performance of Invesco's assets (two-thirds of AuM performed better than the respective peer group in the past), allow the asset management firm to uphold a positive reputation, which provides a competitive advantage versus peers.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Invesco's recovery to higher levels of profitability in 2021 was very strong, but 2022 was a way weaker year again, due to equity market struggles. We believe that earnings-per-share will decline this year as well, but that Invesco should be able to generate some earnings-per-share growth in the long run. Invesco's shares trade slightly below our fair value estimate and the total return outlook is solid. We rate Invesco a hold at current prices.
