Overview & Current Events

Modiv Industrial (formerly known as Modiv) is Real Estate Investment Trust, which, as its name suggests, aims to pay Monthly Dividends to its shareholders. The company acquires, owns, and actively manages single-tenant net-lease industrial, retail, and office properties in the United States, focusing on strategically essential and mission-critical properties with predominantly investment-grade tenants. As of its most recent filings, the company's portfolio comprised 44 properties that occupied 4.6 million square feet of aggregate leasable area. Prior to its public listing in 2022, the company Modiv was one of the largest non-listed REITs to raise funds entirely via crowdfunding and the first real estate crowdfunding platform to be entirely investor-owned. The company generated $46.2 million in revenues last year and is based in Costa Mesa, California.

On August 10th, 2023, Modiv sold 13 non-industrial assets for $42 million and purchased two more industrial manufacturing properties in July. The company has already been assertively redeploying cash proceeds into additional industrial manufacturing assets to achieve its goal of having a super-majority of industrial assets.

On November 13th, 2023, Modiv reported its Q3-2023 results for the period ending September 30th, 2023. For the quarter, total revenues came in at $12.5 million, up 21.4% year-over-year. The increase reflects the acquisition of 16 industrial manufacturing properties since June 30th, 2022.

AFFO was $3.7 million, or $0.49 per diluted share, compared with AFFO of $3.1 million, or $0.42 per diluted share, in the prior year period. For FY2023, we expect AFFO per share to be close to $1.55 based on the company's current leasing profile. The year-over-year decline is due to assuming a lack of any extraordinary factors that could boost results, similar to last year's termination fees.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

Year	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2028
AFFO/shr	---	---	---	---	---	---	$1.56	$1.19	$1.52	$2.22	$1.55	$1.55
DPS	---	---	---	---	$0.37	$0.70	$0.70	$1.46	$1.08	$1.25	$1.15	$1.15
Shares¹	---	---	---	0.1	2.0	3.7	5.0	8.0	7.5	7.5	7.5	14.0

Modiv's financials have a very short history, so it's rather hard to assess whether the company's mass-acquisition growth strategy has been fruitful. Management has been primarily focused on acquiring industrial properties, but they've stated they may also target other types, including retail properties, data centers, and storage properties. For instance, last year, the company acquired four industrial properties and one retail property. Modiv's strategy is to keep on acquiring more properties, which it hopes will be accretive to AFFO per share over time.

That said, we believe this is going to be a tough journey, as financing has become very expensive for the company. Its hefty dividend, which is distributed on a monthly basis, deters the issuance of common stock due to its hefty yield, which would likely exceed the ROI from acquired assets. Issuing debt is also going to be very expensive for the company, as creditors should have elevated demands from such a small player in the industry in a rising-rates environment.

The company's 8.0%-yielding preferred equity, which accounts for about 14% of Modiv's share capital, also sounds like an expensive route. Thus, we expect stable results in the medium-term until we get a clearer picture of Modiv's prospects. The rate of monthly dividends currently stands at $0.0958. We don't believe the company can afford any dividend increases moving forward.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2028
Avg. P/AFFO	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	6.8	9.8	8.0
Avg. Yld.	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	8.3%	7.6%	9.3%

Modiv is currently valued at about 8x our projected earnings for FY2023. Given the risks attached to the possible lack of growth prospects moving forward, we believe that this is a fair valuation. The 7.6% yield is notable, as the market requires a high tangible return from Modiv, given its risk profile. At the end of 2022, the company claimed its Net Asset Value (NAV) per share stood at $27.72, which implies shares are trading at half their book value. However, we believe this is due to the balance sheet reflecting the prices paid by the company prior to becoming public to acquire these assets, for which we believe it overpaid.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2028
Payout	---	---	---	---	---	---	45%	123%	71%	56%	74%	74%

While Modiv's monthly dividend appears covered, we wouldn't trust it just yet. The company has to put a lengthier track record of robust AFFO/share generation to do so, and the current market environment will certainly test this. Some notable qualities include a lengthy weighted average lease term of 14.0 years, which should provide predictable cash flow. Still, due to its length, it may be a curse if expenses rise faster than the company's negotiated leasing rates during this period, which could result in a decline in profits. Regardless, Modiv seems to have a quality tenant base as well, including Costco, 3M, and Northrop Grumman. We don't identify any particular competitive advantages. While the company's properties are mission-critical for many of its tenants, we don't exclude the possibility of a recession hurting Modiv's results. Finally, we highlight that shares have limited liquidity. On average, just 15,000 shares are traded daily.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Modiv is one of the newest monthly dividend stocks to enter the public markets and our coverage universe. The company's track record is short, so we can't make something meaningful out of it. However, we believe that the company will have a hard time pursuing its growth strategy in the current market environment without risking over-diluting shareholders. Based on our assumptions, which includes no growth on a per-share, and a valuation headwind, the stock could produce annualized returns of about 3.6%. Future returns are projected to be powered largely by the dividend. We rate Modiv a sell.
