Overview & Current Events

Regency Centers Corporation is a fully integrated real estate investment trust specializing in retail locations whose tenants include highly productive grocers, restaurants, service providers, and various other best-in-class retailers. The trust has full or partial ownership interests in 481 retail properties primarily anchored by market-leading grocery stores. Its properties are principally located in affluent and infill trade areas across the United States and contain approximately 48.4 million square feet of gross leasable area. The trust generates about $1.2 billion in revenues and is based in Jacksonville, Florida.

On November 2nd, 2023, Regency Centers reported its Q3 results for the period ending September 30th, 2023. Revenues rose by 8.6% to $323.6 million. Higher revenues were primarily due to higher leasing and occupancy rates.

At the end of the quarter, the trust's wholly-owned portfolio plus its pro-rata share of co-investment partnerships was 94.6% leased, a stable result sequentially. Regency's same-property portfolio was 95.4% leased, 20 basis points higher compared to the previous quarter or 70 basis points higher compared to last year.

Nareit FFO grew 4.9% to $182.8 million year-over-year. The result was impacted by $1.5 million of merger transition expenses related to the company's acquisition of Urstadt Biddle, which closed during Q3. On a per-share basis, FFO landed at $1.02, a cent higher compared to $1.01 in Q3-2022.

Management revised its outlook for fiscal 2023. They expect same-property net operating income growth, excluding termination fees or collection of 2020/2021, to be about 2.9% (down from 3.0% and 3.5% previously). Further, Nareit FFO/share is expected to be between $4.13 and $4.15 (up from $4.11 and $4.15 previously). We have utilized the midpoint of the updated range in our estimates.

On November 3rd, Regency Centers raised its dividend by 3.1% to a quarterly rate of $0.67.

Regency has achieved a solid track record of modest but gradually higher FFO/share over time. The 10-year and 5-year FFO/share CAGRs stand at 5.1% and 9.3%, respectively. In recent years, the trust has excelled despite the challenges faced by retail locations due to the growing prominence of e-commerce, a trend that was further accentuated during the COVID-19 pandemic. The company's major tenants, including Kroger (2.7% of annualized rent), Whole Foods (2.7%), and TJX (2.7%), are not at risk of going out of business anytime soon. Regency's growth prospects may seem somewhat limited, but there are noteworthy factors to consider. These include rising leasing rates, portfolio value enhancement within its development pipeline, and the pursuit of additional accretive investment opportunities, exemplified by the recent acquisition of Urstadt Biddle. Along with taking into account higher interest rates, we anticipate a 4% growth in FFO/share through 2028.

Regency slashed its dividend during the Great Recession and resumed its DPS growth in 2014. Since then, dividends have grown annually. We expect DPS growth of around 3.5% in the medium-term, which underlying FFOs could sustain.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	Now	2028
Avg. P/FFO	18.3	19.6	23.6	31.4	20.6	17.2	17.2	13.5	16.6	10.7	15.2	13.0
Avg. Yld.	3.9%	3.3%	2.8%	2.3%	3.3%	3.4%	3.5%	6.0%	3.5%	5.8%	4.3%	4.9%

Regency has traded a P/FFO close to 15 over the past five years. We believe that the current multiple of 15.2 overvalues the stock, given the ongoing rise in interest rates and Regency's modest growth prospects. A P/FFO of 13.0 should better suit the stock, as it reflects both the underlying risks of the ongoing macro environment and the trust's qualities, including tenant diversification and high occupancy rates. Regency is currently offering a yield of 4.3%. We expect the yield to advance higher following a multiple compression.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2028
Payout	70%	65%	66%	73%	68%	58%	60%	81%	60%	62%	65%	63%

While Regency did cut its dividend back during the Great Financial Crisis, we don't expect a dividend cut due to the resiliency shown during the pandemic combined with the relatively comfortable 65% payout ratio based on this year's expected FFO/share. That being said, if the trust's financials were to be under pressure again, a cut is not unlikely either. Overall, Regency enjoys some decent qualities, including a quality tenant base of blue-chip companies, with no tenant accounting for more than 3.0% of annualized base rent (Publix). It also maintains a strong balance sheet with a BBB+ credit rating from S&P, has $1.25 billion in liquidity, and features a net debt to EBITDA ratio of 5.0, which is somewhat tolerable. Still, a recession is likely to adversely impact the trust's financials and lead to a dividend cut.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Regency Centers has shown a robust track record of FFO generation, maintaining solid financials even during the pandemic despite facing significant headwinds. Further, management's guidance points toward another year of relatively stable performance ahead despite higher interest rates. We forecast annualized total returns of 5.1% through 2028, driven by a growth of 4% in FFO/share and the 4.3% dividend yield, offset by a 3.0% annual valuation headwind. We rate shares a hold due to projected returns.
