Overview & Current Events

Autoliv is a global manufacturer of airbags, seatbelts, and steering wheels for automobile manufacturers all over the globe. The company is the industry leader in a critical and growing segment of the automobile manufacturing process. It was founded in 1953 and since then, has grown to 63,000 employees, more than $11 billion in revenue this year and an $8.9 billion market capitalization. Autoliv is listed in both New York and Stockholm and is headquartered in the latter city; we use the New York listing and U.S. dollars for this report.

Autoliv posted fourth quarter and full-year earnings on January 26th, 2024, and results were somewhat mixed. Adjusted earnings-per-share came to $3.74, which was a staggering 44 cents ahead of expectations. Revenue soared 18% higher year-over-year to $2.75 billion, but missed estimates by about $20 million.

The company said it benefited from pricing increases, organic volume growth, and cost cutting measures that led to much higher margins. That led to earnings more than doubling from the year-ago quarter, and nearly doubling for the full year. Indeed, Autoliv posted records for sales and adjusted operating income. All regions outperformed except China.

Autoliv noted it expects gradual improvements throughout 2024, which should see higher operating margins this year from last year. It is reducing headcount and reducing manufacturing capacity to meet lower vehicle demand out of Europe. These measures should lead to operating margin rising from 8.6% of revenue in 2023 to 10.5% in 2024.

We start the year with an estimate of $9.75, which would be a record, if achieved.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

Year	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2029

DPS	$2.12	$2.22	$2.30	$2.38	$2.46	$2.48	$0.62	$1.88	$2.58	$2.66	$2.72	$3.64
Shares²	89	88	88	87	87	87	87	88	88	83	80	70

Autoliv's earnings-per-share has been volatile in the past decade, and the overall trajectory has been flat. The company struggled during the Great Recession given its exposure to the automobile market, which of course declined significantly as a result of the economic downturn. However, the recovery was swift and strong. We're estimating long-term earnings growth of 12% annually from this year's base, which is now higher than prior estimates. Guidance for 2024 is quite bullish, and we think margin improvement efforts will help enormously in the quarters to come. Profitability in 2023 was outstanding and bodes well for earnings looking forward.

Autoliv is performing well against benchmarks over the long term. Light vehicle production is generally back to normalized levels, but there was a sizable decline in late-2021 due to supply constraints globally, and there are signs of continued volatility. We note that Autoliv's level of outperformance against LVP has remained strong throughout all portions of the cycle.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	Now	2029
Avg. P/E	19.6	22.2	17.1	23.1	14.1	13.3	22.7	19.1	17.0	13.5	11.1	16.0
Avg. Yld.	2.1%	1.9%	2.1%	2.1%	2.5%	3.3%	0.9%	2.0%	3.4%	2.4%	2.5%	1.3%

Autoliv's price-to-earnings ratio has declined since our last report to 11.1 times our earnings estimate for 2024. We see fair value at 16 times earnings, which is more normalized based upon historical data, because Autoliv has rebounded exceptionally quickly from the slowdown of 2020. Given the move in the valuation, we now see a meaningful positive impact from the valuation going forward.

The current yield is 2.5%, so Autoliv is still a respectable income stock at about 1% higher than the S&P 500.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2029
Payout	42%	43%	36%	49%	36%	43%	20%	37%	57%	32%	28%	21%

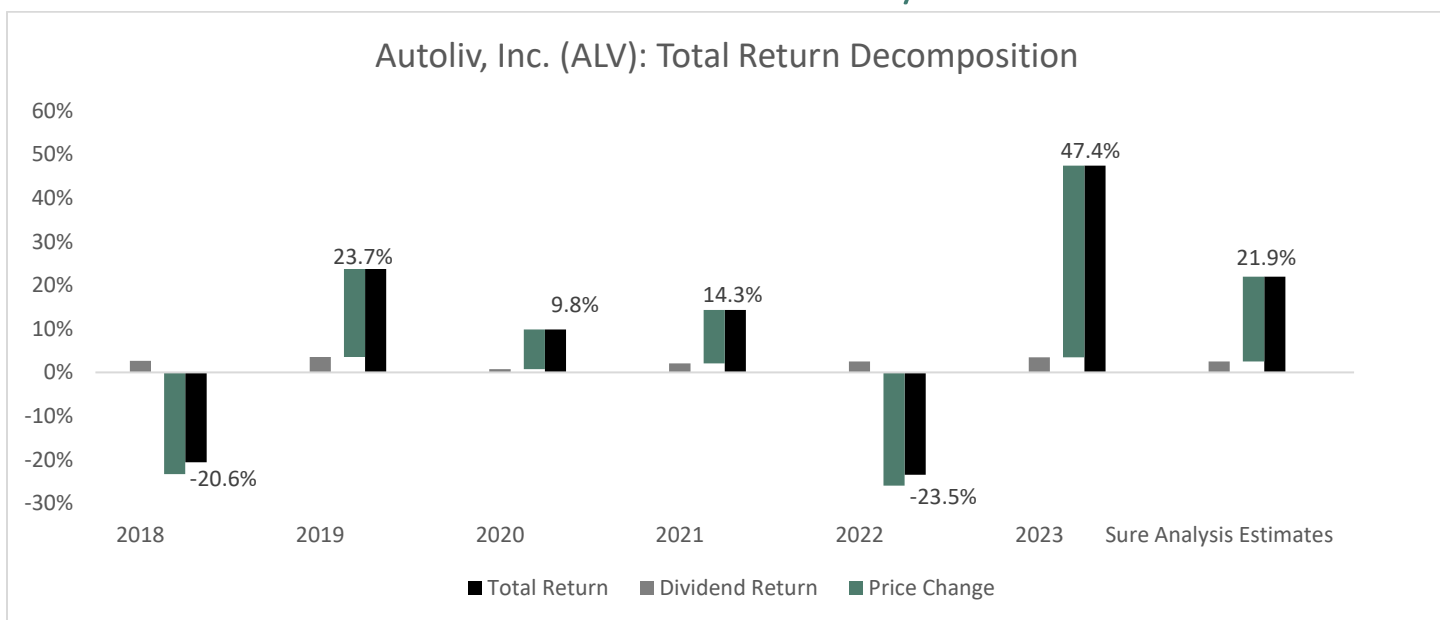

We expect moderate dividend growth given management is likely to be shy about raising it to the point where it may need to be cut again in the future. The current payout ratio of 28% is more than sustainable.

Autoliv's competitive advantage is in its strong market share and the fact that it counts every major global automaker among its customers. It undoubtedly suffered in 2020, as it did during the last recession, but has rebounded. Autoliv continues to get multiple products in major vehicle launches across the world, reaffirming its strong market position, but it will remain reliant upon global light vehicle production.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Autoliv's valuation is lower since our last update. Revenue and margins were outstanding in Q4, and guidance is quite positive for 2024. The dividend is growing, and we see Autoliv's total return outlook as exceptional at 21.9% annually, based on projected growth of 12%, a 7.6% tailwind from the valuation, and the 2.5% yield. Given the double-digit projected returns, we're reiterating the stock at a buy rating.
