Overview & Current Events

L'Oréal is one of the largest cosmetic conglomerates in the world, boasting a portfolio of 36 household brands. The company offers shampoos, hair and skincare products, shower gels, cleansers, styling and make-up products, perfumes, and other related goods, through some of the most recognized brands in the world. These include Garnier, Maybelline New York, Giorgio Armani Beauty, Kiehl's, Urban Decay, Biotherm, and Ralph Lauren. L'Oréal generates around $44 billion in annual sales and is based in Paris, France. All figures in this report have been converted to USD unless otherwise noted.

On February 9th, 2024, L'Oréal published its full-year results for the period ending December 31st, 2023. For the year, sales came in at $44.3 billion, 11% higher like-for-like (same product structure and constant currency) compared to last year, powered by strong growth across all segments. Management mentioned that despite a challenging environment of geopolitical tensions, inflationary pressures, and a stagnating beauty market in China, L'Oréal delivered its best like-for-like growth in more than 20 years (excluding 2021).

The Consumer division had its best growth in 30 years, growing by 12.6% year-over-year. Makeup was the leading contributor to this success, driven by several exciting product launches. Professional Products, L'Oréal Luxe, and Dermatological Beauty divisions grew sales by 7.6%, 4.5 %, and 28.4%, respectively, retaining a fantastic momentum.

EPS came in at €12.08, up 7.3% year-over-year, or €11.52 on a diluted basis after non-controlling interests. This translates to $12.72 at last year's EURUSD closing rate.

The company also increased its dividend by 10% to €6.00 or €7.26, including the loyalty bonus (see below) to be paid in late April. It implies an ex-bonus dividend of $7.11 for FY2023. We forecast FY2024 EPS of $14.35, but we do not speculate on FY2023's DPS.

L'Oréal's EPS and DPS, as shown in the table, have both been affected by FX over the past decade when expressed in U.S. dollars. The company's EPS and DPS have grown by around 13.9% and 10.5% over the last five years. Earnings should keep growing at a strong pace, powered by organic growth, price increases, and the gross profit margin expansion due to L'Oréal's economies of scale. The company is a consumer staples behemoth not only in Europe but also globally, enjoying massive scale capabilities that can dominate global demand trends. We are forecasting a 10% intermediate growth rate, assuming no impacts from FX. Dividends are paid once annually. L'Oréal boasts one of the longest dividend growth records amongst European firms, with its latest dividend increase of 10% marking 24 years of annual increases (in Euros). The company offers a unique perk to its long-term shareholders. Those holding shares for at least two years receive a 10% “loyalty bonus” on the original dividend. We are forecasting DPS growth of around 8.5% through 2029.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	Now	2029
Avg. P/E	15.0	27.4	29.9	27.3	30.9	37.4	41.1	41.5	28.8	32.1	32.2	26.0
Avg. Yld.	2.1%	1.9%	2.0%	2.0%	1.8%	1.5%	1.5%	1.3%	1.9%	1.7%	1.5%	1.8%

L'Oréal's consistently high valuation over the past decade reflects investor willingness to pay a premium for its qualities, dominance, and growth. The company's "loyalty bonus" discourages share sales, contributing to sustained valuation premiums. Even after expecting further growth in earnings in fiscal 2024, L'Oréal is trading at a hefty P/E of 32.2 currently. We believe shares are overvalued, but given the stock's ever-persistent tendency to retain a rich P/E, we cannot be certain that a multiple contraction will materialize anytime soon – especially with L'Oréal's growth being sustained. We are using a fair, more reasonable P/E of 26 in our estimates, nonetheless.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2029
Payout	32%	53%	60%	56%	56%	58%	63%	58%	57%	56%	50%	46%

L'Oréal's dividend should be considered very safe. The company benefits from consistent profitability, which allowed it to keep raising its payout even during the Great Financial Crisis. The payout ratio currently stands at a healthy level of around 50%. L'Oréal's competitive advantage lies in its sheer size, which has resulted in the company accumulating a significant market share. Its companies have massive brand values, generating consistent sales globally. Hence investors should expect a relatively stable performance even under a harsh recession, as was the case during 2007-2008. Finally, L'Oréal has very little long-term debt on its balance sheet, with a long-term debt/equity ratio of about 21%. The company primarily self-funds its operations and capital expenditure requirements.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

L'Oréal is one of the most respected European stocks, featuring an incredibly consistent record of shareholder returns. The company's capital returns have been growing for years without interruption, while its “loyalty bonus” program has been a phenomenal strategy to reduce share price fluctuations over time. Total return potential comes in at 7% per annum, driven by 10% growth in earnings and the 1.5% dividend yield, offset by the possibility of a 4.2% annual valuation headwind. It's also worth noting that France applies a considerable dividend withholding tax of 30% under typical circumstances, which could further diminish our expected returns. L'Oréal earns a hold rating.
