Overview & Current Events

Genuine Parts Company was founded in 1928 and since that time, it has grown into a sprawling conglomerate that sells automotive and industrial parts, electrical materials, and general business products. Its global span reaches throughout North America, Australia, New Zealand, and Europe and is comprised of more than 3,000 locations. It has about 60,000 employees and trades with a market capitalization of $21 billion, with about $24 billion in annual revenue. Genuine Parts is also a Dividend King, having raised its dividend for an incredible 68 consecutive years.

Genuine Parts posted fourth quarter and full-year earnings on February 15th, 2024, and results were mixed. Adjusted earnings-per-share came to $2.26, which was six cents ahead of estimates. Revenue was up very slightly year-over-year to $5.6 billion, which missed estimates by $60 million. Sales were driven by a 2% benefit from acquisitions, a 0.3% favorable impact of forex translation, and a -1.2% impact from comparable sales.

The company noted it is undergoing a corporate restructuring to lower headcount and improve efficiency. With these changes should come better operating margins over time.

The company guided for $9.79 to $9.90 per share in adjusted earnings, and we've set our initial estimate at the low end at $9.80. Genuine Parts expects to see 3% to 5% sales growth, in line with analyst estimates. It also expects to see costs in the range of $100 million to $200 million due to the restructuring. However, that should offer $40 million in savings in 2024, as well as $45 million to $90 million on an annualized basis thereafter.

The company raised its dividend by 5.3% to a new payout of $1 per share quarterly, its 68th consecutive year of dividend increases.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

Earnings-per-share growth has seen stops and starts but over the long-term, Genuine Parts delivers. The company's businesses are all what could be considered staples as it serves businesses and consumers in areas where there is likely to be demand for the long run. The company's acquisitions have led the way in terms of growth and will continue to do so moving forward. We are forecasting 6% annualized earnings-per-share growth for the next five years in a continuation of this trend, in addition to positive organic sales in the Automotive segment. The company's nearly constant acquisitions should help keep the top line moving, and we note margins have improved of late. In addition, the company's Industrial segment continues to struggle with COVID-related issues, but those seem to be abating somewhat, and results were outstanding in 2021. We note improving sales and margins powered earnings higher for 2022, and recent guidance was very bullish for that to continue in 2023.

Updated March 5th, 2024, by Josh Arnold

Genuine Parts' pipeline of new acquisitions should keep the trend of higher revenue in place for the foreseeable future, with sales growth being the primary driver of earnings-per-share growth moving forward, in concert with a small amount of share repurchases. Gross margins continued to gradually improve in 2021 and operating margins were strong as a result. Margins were quite strong in 2022 and 2023 as well, and we see the restructuring program as a sizable margin tailwind going forward, potentially.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	Now	2029
Avg. P/E	19.3	19.5	20.8	19.2	17.0	17.8	17.1	17.7	20.8	14.8	15.3	17.0
Avg. Yld.	2.6%	2.7%	2.8%	3.0%	3.0%	3.0%	3.5%	2.7%	2.0%	2.7%	2.7%	2.5%

Genuine Parts' price-to-earnings ratio rose steadily in the period from 2009 to 2017, moving from 13.8 to 19.2 in that time frame. The stock now trades for 15.3 times our earnings estimate for this year as earnings estimate growth is outpacing the share price. With the price-to-earnings ratio below our long-term fair value estimate at 17, we see an annual tailwind to total returns from the valuation.

Genuine Parts is famous for its dividend, as its 68 consecutive years of increases makes it a Dividend King. The current yield of 2.7% is back in line with historical norms, and we expect the yield to remain near or under 3% for the foreseeable future.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2029
Payout	49%	52%	56%	57%	51%	54%	60%	47%	43%	41%	41%	43%

Genuine Parts' payout ratio had been quite steady between 50% and 60% of earnings for many years, but is well below that today. We see the dividend rising at roughly the pace of earnings growth, keeping the payout ratio at around half of earnings in the years to come, or slightly lower, consistent with the past decade.

Genuine Parts' competitive advantages include its wide array of industries and customers served, geographic reach and the fact that it sells what amount to industrial staples. Genuine Parts is still prone to earnings declines during recessions but performs relatively well; this is a defensive stock for a retailer/wholesaler.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Overall, Genuine Parts Company looks undervalued based upon its current valuation. Given this, we are expecting total annual returns of 10.5% for the next five years. Returns could accrue from the current 2.7% yield and 6% earnings growth, as well as a 2.1% tailwind from the valuation. Given this total return outlook, we're reiterating the stock at a buy rating.
