Overview & Current Events

ONEOK is an energy company that engages in the gathering and processing of natural gas, as well as a natural gas liquids business and natural gas pipelines (interstate and intrastate). ONEOK also owns storage facilities for natural gas. ONEOK is headquartered in Tulsa, Oklahoma, and was founded in 1906.

ONEOK reported its fourth quarter earnings results on February 26. The company reported that it generated revenues of $5.2 billion during the quarter, which was 4% more than the revenues that ONEOK generated during the previous year's quarter. The revenue movement compared to the prior year's quarter was influenced by commodity price movements, while the Magellan Midstream takeover also impacted revenues. ONEOK's input costs generally go down when commodity prices decline, as expenses are partially commodity-price based. Between some organic EBITDA growth and the addition of Magellan Midstream's EBITDA, ONEOK managed to grow its EBITDA by a sizeable 55% compared to the previous year's quarter. On a per-share basis, however, growth was less pronounced, as ONEOK had to issue shares to pay for the takeover of Magellan Midstream which closed in late 2023.

ONEOK earned $1.18 per share during the fourth quarter, but that number is lower than the company's cash flows due to depreciation charges. The company is forecasting EBITDA at $6.1 billion for the current year, representing a close to 20% increase versus 2023. This increase is partially driven by the acquisition of Magellan Midstream partners. For the current year, somewhat lower earnings-per-share are expected, partially due to dilution.

ONEOK's growth track record is not overly convincing, at least for the 2010-2016 time frame, during which there was no meaningful growth. 2018 was a strong year for ONEOK, as the company grew its profits and its distributable cash flows by a lot. The strong performance during 2018 can be attributed to the successful roll-up of ONEOK's MLP.

ONEOK grew its business at a strong pace in 2018 and 2019, which led to record cash flows in 2019, on a company-wide basis and on a per-share basis. This is due to new growth projects coming online, such as pipelines and fractionation services in the Permian basins. 2020's cash flows were down slightly, and an increase in the company's share count diluted shareholders, which further pressured ONEOK's DCF-per-share. Nevertheless, the company continued to cover its dividend payments with its cash flows even during the pandemic-stricken year. ONEOK has reduced its growth spending in the near term, due to less focus on new growth projects and since this will allow ONEOK to pay down debt in coming years. Overall, growth spending should still allow for some earnings growth in the long run. ONEOK grew its profits meaningfully in 2021 and 2022, and it is expected that net profits will rise quite a lot in 2023 as well, on the back of a major EBITDA increase.

¹ The table above contains earnings-per-share for 2009 to 2016 and 2021 and beyond, and DCF-per-share for 2017-2020.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	Now	2029
P/E	40.5	32.7	24.5	15.4	13.1	15.7	9.0	11.2	16.7	13.0	15.1	12.0
Avg. Yld.	3.5%	6.2%	6.0%	5.1%	6.0%	4.6%	9.8%	6.3%	5.8%	5.4%	5.4%	6.4%

ONEOK has traded at a relatively high valuation in the past. Shares are trading for around 15 times this year's forecasted net profits right now. The growth outlook for the company and the industry is not overly strong, as increasing regulation has made it very difficult to build new pipes. Our fair value target is 12 times net profits. At current prices, ONEOK trades above our fair value estimate, which could result in multiple compression headwinds.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2029
Payout	140%	204%	147%	76.4%	74.7%	72.9%	88.4%	71.2%	97.4%	69.7%	81%	77%

ONEOK paid out more than its net earnings during parts of the last decade. But since cash flows oftentimes were higher than the reported net profit, due to high depreciation charges, the dividend was still sustainable during those times. The risk of a dividend cut by ONEOK is not very high, but a cut should not be ruled out, as management may decide to focus on improving the balance sheet further.

A lot of ONEOK's revenues, especially after the roll-up of its MLP, are fee-based or hedged, which makes the company less sensitive to commodity price swings. Therefore ONEOK can operate with considerable leverage without being in dangerous territory, as its cash flows are not overly volatile, although they are still impacted by the volumes that are transported by ONEOK. The fee-based nature of ONEOK's revenues and non-cyclical demand for natural gas, e.g. for heating, is what has made ONEOK more or less recession-resilient in the past.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

ONEOK is a natural gas focused infrastructure company. Even though it is not the largest among its peers, the company has benefited a lot from growing natural gas production in the United States in the past. We see ONEOK generating some profit growth going forward, but not at the level seen in the past, due to headwinds for the industry, such as harsh regulation. Thanks to the dividend yield, forecasted total returns are solid, which is why we rate the stock a hold.
