Overview & Current Events

Ping An Insurance Company of China, one of the leading insurers in the country, was founded in 1988. The technology-powered personal financial services group has nearly 232 million retail customers, making the firm one of the largest financial services companies in the world. Ping An has two strategies, “pan financial assets” and “pan healthcare,” which focus on financial and healthcare services through the company’s financial services platform, along with its five ecosystems: financial services, healthcare, auto services, real estate services, and Smart City services. The Life and Health Insurance segment is the largest business, and represents over half of the company’s operating profit. As a Chinese company, Ping An Insurance reports its results in Chinese Yuan, but all numbers in this report are in USD, unless noted otherwise.

On March 21st, 2024, Ping An posted its FY2023 results for the period ending December 31st, 2023. Ping An continued to execute its growth strategy, expanding further on an operational basis. Its retail customer count grew by around 2.2% year-to-date to almost 232 million. That said, contracts per retail customer came in at 2.95 down from 2.97 last year.

Revenues rose by 4.7 % to $143 billion, mainly due to higher investment income. Earnings-per ADR shares, or EPADR, fell by 25% to $1.86 due to higher expenses related to issuing insurance contracts. For FY2024, we estimate EPADR of about $1.80. Dividends for FY2023 amounted to $0.68, down on a USD basis, but once again up on an RMB basis. We don’t forecast this year’s potential dividends.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

During the last ten years, Ping An has delivered resilient profits and consistent growth. More and more customers enter its insurance ecosystem by the quarter. China is a huge market, with a population well above 1 billion and a high economic growth rate. As a result, Life and Health Insurance – which make up the majority of the company’s operating profit - should continue delivering solid results in the medium-term.

In addition, Ping An’s technology innovations, centered on fintech and health technologies, should also boost its growth. To highlight the company’s innovation capabilities, Ping An’s technology patent applications increased by 518 from the previous quarter to 51,333. Combined with its ever-growing ecosystem, we believe that Ping An will continue unlocking successive cost efficiencies and operating synergies ahead. That said, we retain both our EPADR and DPADR growth estimates to a humble 4%, primarily due to the company’s customer growth slowing down and its results being affected by the ongoing uncertain environment in the equity markets.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	Now	2029
Avg. P/E	14.2	12.8	9.8	14.3	9.9	9.8	9.01	6	7.6	6.3	5.0	6.0
Avg. Yld.	1.1%	1.4%	2.2%	2.1%	2.9%	2.3%	2.3%	4.6%	3.7%	5.8%	7.6%	6.3%

Ping An's valuation has varied significantly over the past decade, as earnings remained relatively stagnant for a few years before increasing significantly between 2013 and 2019. Chinese corporate governance concerns have also resulted in shares historically trading at a notable discount compared to the company's U.S. peers. Assuming FY2023 EPADR of $1.80, the stock is trading at a P/E of just 5X. We believe that this multiple undervalues the stock. We have set our fair multiple at 6X, which we believe better reflects the stock's overall prospects. At 7.6%, the dividend yield is one of the highest at which the stock has ever traded.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2029
Payout	3%	4%	6%	11%	17%	17%	25%	28%	28%	37%	38%	38%

Ping An has maintained a low payout ratio of the past decade, retaining most of its earnings to be reinvested for future growth. The dividend remains well-covered. Management's latest increase should further reassure investors of its safety. Additionally, the company managed to increase its customers in all segments, which is quite impressive considering the hundreds of millions it already has. Ping An has been developing significant competitive advantages, owning a well-known household brand name in the insurance space. Further, its robust underlying cash flows from premiums should maintain consistent profitability, increasing shareholder value over time. By operating through a well-diversified portfolio of financial, healthcare, and technology services, the company should not suffer from any adverse effects in its sales if one of them faces temporary challenges. This was the case during the Great Recession when Ping An performed resiliently. Still, profitability could come under pressure under a future recession.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Ping An's insurance FY2023 results were decent despite earnings declining notably due to higher costs. We believe EPS will rebound this year, and forecast that the stock will produce annualized returns of 13.8% through 2029. This is to be powered by our growth estimates, the 7.6% yield, and the possibility of a 3.9% annual valuation tailwind. We rate shares as a buy at their current price levels. However, we remind that investors should be wary of the risks that come attached to Chinese securities.
