Overview & Current Events

National HealthCare was founded in 1971 to own and manage medical facilities. It operates skilled nursing facilities, home and hospice agencies, assisted living facilities, independent living facilities, and behavioral health hospitals. Besides operating its own facilities, National HealthCare leases some facilities to third-party operators. As of March 31st, 2024, National Healthcare operated or managed 65 skilled nursing facilities with 8,421 licensed beds in addition to its assortment of other healthcare, homecare, and hospice assets.

National HealthCare was traditionally a stable business with predictable growth. The pandemic upended this, however. Earnings plunged in 2020, soared in 2021 thanks to government relief payments, and then plunged again in 2022 as the payments wound down. Things are now returning to normal, with 2023 being a more standard year for the company. However, National HealthCare has adjusted its portfolio a bit to reflect the changing healthcare marketplace; the company left the Massachusetts and New Hampshire markets in the third quarter of 2022 as it moved on from seven facilities in those states. This concentrates National HealthCare's focus on its home market in the Southeast.

National HealthCare reported its first quarter results on May 10th, 2024. Adjusted earnings-per-share of $0.97 rose from the $0.79 figure recorded in the same period of 2022. Revenues jumped 10% to $297 million for the quarter. The firm's operating results improved markedly as pandemic-related headwinds have finally subsided. These results were better than expected, and keep up the company's strong operational momentum that it has enjoyed since mid-2023.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

Year	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2029

National HealthCare had a generally increasing earnings-per-share trend over the past decade; at least that was the case until March 2020. With the onset of the pandemic, however, the business faced many additional costs for keeping facilities safe and well-staffed with qualified healthcare professionals. National HealthCare received $47.5 million and $63.4 million of CARES Act government relief in 2020 and 2021 respectively, which added a great deal to the company's overall earnings.

As this emergency aid wound down, however, the company's earnings slumped in 2022. 2023 was a return to form, though, and we expect favorable results in 2024 as well. Over the long term, we expect 8% annualized earnings growth. The company had delivered a strong series of dividend hikes prior to 2020. However, the dividend was paused during the pandemic before hikes resumed in 2022. The much better earnings performance in 2023 opens the door to larger dividend hikes over the next few years, though the company's recent hike, on May 9th, 2024, was a modest 3.4% increase from 59 cents to 61 cents per quarter.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	Now	2029
Avg. P/E	17.8	19.9	19.6	18.6	18.0	18.2	25.3	13.4	26.8	21.4	25.6	19.0
Avg. Yld.	2.4%	2.3%	2.7%	2.8%	2.8%	2.6%	3.0%	2.0%	3.7%	3.1%	2.4%	2.6%

National HealthCare has generally maintained a P/E ratio in the mid-to-high teens. Currently, the company's P/E ratio is above average due to a sharp rally in the stock price over the past few quarters. We expect the firm's P/E ratio to settle back at 19 in future years as this is not normally a name that commands a premium valuation.

The company has traditionally offered a dividend yield between 2.5% and 3.0%. The payout ratio has fallen back to the low end of that range today.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2029
Payout	43%	46%	53%	51%	51%	46%	76%	39%	93%	66%	63%	49%

National HealthCare saw its payout ratio spike in 2022 given the fall in its earnings, but is back to more sustainable territory now. The pandemic highlighted a number of risk factors within the skilled healthcare industry that investors previously hadn't focused on. That said, the industry has normally been viewed as a defensive one serving a growing market given America's aging demographics.

In addition, National HealthCare has a pristine balance sheet. It has no long-term debt, while holding a significant cash position. This gives it additional flexibility to navigate the currently choppy waters in its industry.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

National HealthCare has now fully put its pandemic-related disruptions behind it and has returned to solid growth. Furthermore, the company's strong balance sheet is an asset, and the essential nature of its business leads to steady revenues. But shares surged 57% in 2023 on its earnings rebound along with the S&P 600 SmallCap Index adding NHC stock to its holdings late in 2023. While National HealthCare has positive fundamentals, shares have run well beyond our fair value estimate. We forecast 4.1% annual returns and shares earn a hold rating today.
