Overview & Current Events

Silgan Holdings manufactures and sells metal and plastic containers, as well as packaging closures. Its containers are found in everyday food consumables such as pet food, fruits and vegetables, and drinks, while its closures are applied to the beverage, garden, and personal care products. The company generates nearly $6.0 billion in revenues and is based in Stamford, Connecticut.

On May 1st, 2024, Silgan reported its Q1 results for the period ending March 31st, 2024. Quarterly revenues fell 7% year-over-year to $1.32 billion. Specifically, the metal containers segment's sales fell 8% to $617.1 million due to 5% lower sales volumes driven by continued customer destocking across several categories, as compared to very strong demand in the first quarter of 2023, and the contractual pass through of lower raw material costs. The dispensing & specialty closures segment also posted soft results, with its sales falling by 8% year-over-year to $539.9 million. This decline was primarily the result of a lower unit volume/mix of approximately 8%, due to double digit declines in higher volume closures for food and beverage markets. Lastly, custom containers posted a 3% revenue decline to $168.3 million, driven by a 3% decline in sales volumes due to continued customer destocking activity.

Adjusted EPS came in at $0.63, which was below Q1-2023's $0.78. For FY2024, Silgan reiterated its outlook, expecting adjusted EPS to land between $3.55 and $3.75. We have utilized the midpoint of the updated range in our estimates. Past figures in our tables reflect GAAP figures, nonetheless.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

Year	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2029
EPS	$1.44	$1.41	$1.28	$2.44	$2.03	$1.75	$2.79	$3.25	$3.09	$3.00	$3.65	$4.88
DPS	$0.30	$0.32	$0.34	$0.36	$0.40	$0.44	$0.48	$0.56	$0.64	$0.72	$0.76	$1.22
Shares²	126.9	122.0	119.7	110.4	110.6	110.9	110.7	110.4	110.1	106.6	106.6	100.0

Over the past decade, Silgan has averaged an EPS and DPS CAGR of 8.5% and 10.2%, respectively. Demand for packaged and canned foods, as well as sanitization products, has historically hovered stable levels. We believe the company will continue to enjoy stable demand over the long term as its containers and dispensing closures are primarily utilized in consumer staple products which in turn also enjoy stable demand.

We retain our EPS CAGR estimate at 6%, pricing in the possibility of a slowdown in earnings growth due to the company gradually maturing, and to be prudent. A possible decline in volumes caused by an oversupply of Silgan's products could also slow down growth, as already somewhat evident in the company's 2023 results. Share buybacks should mildly aid EPS growth over time. The company's share count has declined by about 16% over the past decade. Silgan repurchased a modest $174.7 million worth of stock last year.

Nevertheless, we retain our DPS CAGR forecast at 10% to reflect management's latest bold payout hike and low payout ratio that should afford meaningful payout increases. Silgan has grown its DPS annually for 19 consecutive years.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	Now	2029
Avg. P/E	17.1	19.9	20.1	22.6	11.1	17.6	12.5	13.5	13.6	15.5	12.4	12.5
Avg. Yld.	1.2%	1.3%	1.3%	1.1%	1.6%	1.5%	1.5%	1.3%	1.5%	1.5%	1.7%	2.0%

Silgan's valuation has remained relatively reasonable over the years, rarely outrunning its underlying financial growth. Shares appear reasonably priced close to 12.5 times their FY2024 expected adjusted EPS. The stock's yield has always remained relatively low, at around 1% to 2%. Despite the rapid dividend increases, aggregate dividends paid out (as well as buybacks) have remained quite humble as the company reinvests most of its proceeds back into the business.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Payout	21%	23%	27%	15%	20%	25%	17%	17%	21%	24%	21%	25%

Investors can rely on Silgan's dividends since the company's payout ratio has historically remained quite low. It currently stands at 20%. Since the company's IPO in 1996, Silgan has never reported a money-losing quarter. Its products are vital for various consumer staples. Hence, its operations are quite stable, displayed in its 20-year dividend growth record. At the same time, however, Silgan operates in a massively competitive space, with quite thin margins. The company's competitors include firms that are multiple times larger than Silgan, such as the Ball Corp. (BLL), the Packaging Corporation of America (PKG), keeping Silgan's net profit margins in the mid-single-digits.

Overall, we believe that the company has showcased decades of robust cash flow generation, with little volatility to its financials. Its operations should remain relatively stable even under adverse economic conditions. Silgan's financial resiliency is evident by the 2026 senior secured notes issue in the midst of the pandemic, in which the company managed to secure $500 million at an ultra-low rate of 1.4%.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Silgan has a long history of stable returns, with the stock lacking any wild fluctuations in its share price throughout the decades. Combining our relatively modest growth expectations, the dividend yield, and assumptions over a somewhat stable valuation ahead, we forecast annualized returns of around 7.8% in the medium-term. Hence, we rate shares a hold. Regardless, we remind investors that they must be aware of the company's razor-thin net income margins, which could easily be compressed following incompetence in passing inflationary costs through. Failure to do so could impact future returns. The pass-through of costs to Silgan's product pricing has been managed well historically, nonetheless.
