Overview & Current Events

America Movil (sometimes stylized as América Móvil) is a Mexican telecommunications company headquartered in Mexico City. The company is the largest wireless telecommunications provider in Latin America based on subscriber count and has the largest market share in Mexico and the third-largest market share in Brazil. America Movil's stock trades on the Mexican Stock Exchange under the ticker AMXL, but United States investors can purchase its stock through American Depositary Receipts which trade on the New York Stock Exchange under the ticker AMX. America Movil trades with a market capitalization of US$55.8 billion and is majority owned by Carlos Slim and family, the richest man in Mexico and one of the wealthiest individuals in the world.

In mid-July, America Movil reported (7/16/24) financial results for the second quarter of fiscal 2024. It added 2.4 million wireless subscribers in the quarter, including 1.8 million mobile postpaid subscribers. Brazil, Colombia and Mexico were the main growth contributors. Service revenue grew 5% and EBITDA grew 7% over the prior year's quarter, at constant exchange rates. It was one of the fastest EBITDA growth rates in the last nine quarters. Operating profit grew 13% at constant exchange rates. We still expect 13% growth of earnings-per-share this year thanks to sustained business momentum.

Despite its dominant business position in Mexico, America Movil has exhibited a remarkably volatile performance record, partly due to the inevitable currency fluctuations. The company was also greatly affected by the pandemic in 2020. However, as the pandemic has subsided, we expect 4.0% average annual earnings-per-share growth over the next five years, partly thanks to the rollout of the 5G network of the company. We find it prudent not to assume a higher growth rate due to the high comparison base formed by the high earnings expected this year.

On the other hand, we reiterate that our America Movil projections have significant uncertainty due to (1) potential fluctuations in the Peso-USD exchange rate and (2) the intention of the Mexican Federal Telecommunications Institute to loosen the company's dominant grip on Mexico's telecommunications industry, where it has a market share of approximately 60% and generates nearly one-third of its total revenues.

America Movil (AMX)

Updated July 17th, 2024 by Aristofanis Papadatos

America Movil is trading at a price-to-earnings ratio of 11.3, which is lower than our fair value estimate of 13.5 times earnings. If the stock trades at a price-to-earnings ratio of 13.5 in five years, it will enjoy a 3.7% annualized gain in its returns thanks to the expansion of its valuation level. Dividend investors should also note that America Movil is subject to Mexico’s 10% withholding tax on cross-border dividend payments.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2029
Payout	36.0%	48.5%	193%	78.6%	43.4%	34.9%	57.4%	13.9%	37.3%	37.6%	33.8%	32.9%

America Movil benefits from being the largest telecommunications company in its operating geography. In addition, America Movil is rated A3 by Moody’s, A- by S&P, and A- by Fitch. While the company carries a significant amount of debt, just like almost all the companies in this sector, its interest expense consumes only 30% of its operating income and hence its debt is manageable.

However, investors should be aware of the greatest risk of America Movil, namely its exposure to the exchange rate of the Peso vs. USD. Currencies of weak economies tend to depreciate vs. the dollar in the long run. This has proved to be the case for the Peso, as it has depreciated by -36% over the last decade. This is a strong headwind, which can significantly reduce the long-term returns of the stock even if the company exhibits great business performance.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

America Movil has a dominant position and has recovered strongly from the pandemic. The stock could offer a 10.2% average annual return over the next five years thanks to 4.0% growth of earnings-per-share, its 3.0% dividend and a potential 3.7% annualized expansion of the valuation level. We maintain our hold rating, as we need a higher expected return to upgrade the stock to “buy” due to its volatile business performance and its currency risk.
