Overview & Current Events

Target was founded in 1902 and after a failed bid to expand into Canada, has operations solely in the U.S. market. Its business consists of about 1,850 big box stores, which offer general merchandise and food, as well as serving as distribution points for the company's burgeoning e-commerce business. Target has a market capitalization of $72 billion and should produce about $107 billion in total revenue this year. The company also sports an extremely impressive dividend increase streak of 56 years.

Target posted second quarter earnings on August 21st, 2024, and results were quite strong, sending the stock jumping after the report. Adjusted earnings-per-share came to $2.57, which was 39 cents ahead of estimates. Revenue was up 2.7% year-over-year to $25.45 billion, which beat by $240 million.

Comparable sales were up 2% year-over-year, making up most of the total sales gain. Consensus was for a gain of 1.1%. Traffic was up 3% year-over-year with all six core merchandising categories seeing positive growth. Digital comparable sales were up 8.7%, once again driving growth.

Operating margin was 6.4% of revenue, vs 4.8% a year ago. Gross margin was 28.9% of revenue, up 190 basis points from a year ago. This was due to cost improvements, offset by higher promotional markdowns. Favorable category mix and lower inventory losses were partially offset by higher digital fulfillment and supply chain costs. Inventory ended the quarter at $12.6 billion, flat to the year-ago period.

Target ended the quarter with $9.5 billion on its share repurchase authorization, and spent just $155 million on repurchases during the quarter.

We see $9.50 in adjusted earnings-per-share for this year on encouraging margins in Q2.

Target has grown its earnings-per-share at an average annual rate of about 8% during the last decade. Due to fierce competition and the failed attempt to expand to Canada, Target's earnings-per-share remained almost flat from 2012 to 2017. However, turnaround efforts have borne fruit and as a result, Target has significantly improved its performance in recent years. The company has reduced its share count over time, although the past two years have seen essentially no change. Overall, we expect 9% annualized growth from what should be a modest level for 2024 given margin issues that cropped up in recent quarters, but appear to be improving. In addition, sales growth remains an issue for Target.

We see comparable sales growth as a challenge, offset by sizable margin expansion from low levels in 2023, and a potential tailwind from the buyback. Target's digital efforts are also working extremely nicely, although there was some pulling back after enormous sales growth during the pandemic. The remaining buyback authorization should be good for a significant tailwind to earnings-per-share in the coming. However, we note that Target remains committed to investing in its digital capabilities, as well as its 50+ year streak of dividend increases.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	Now	2029
Avg. P/E	14.7	16.6	14.6	14.2	14.2	14.4	14.0	16.6	24.8	15.9	16.7	17.0
Avg. Yld.	3.0%	2.8%	3.2%	4.0%	3.3%	2.8%	2.0%	1.4%	2.7%	3.1%	2.8%	2.3%

Target shares trade for 16.7 times our earnings estimate for this year, just below our estimate of fair value at 17 times earnings. We note that the 2.8% yield is back at a more normalized level. If the stock reverts to our estimate of fair value over the next five years, it will produce a fractional tailwind to total returns.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2029
Payout	45%	46%	46%	53%	47%	41%	28%	23%	66%	49%	47%	39%

Target has grown its dividend for more than five decades, making it a Dividend King. The company is investing heavily in its business in order to navigate through the changing landscape in the retail sector. The payout is now 47% of earnings for this year, which is elevated historically. We expect the payout ratio to decline as earnings rise and smaller dividend increases.

Target's competitive advantage comes from its everyday low prices on attractive merchandise in its guest-friendly stores. However, given the price war in the retail sector, Target's moat faces decline. In addition, as consumers tend to curtail their consumption during recessions, the company is vulnerable in such periods. In 2008, its earnings-per-share fell -14%. Nevertheless, that performance was much better than that of most companies, which saw their earnings collapse during the Great Recession. Moreover, it took only one year for the earnings of Target to return to their pre-crisis level. Therefore, while Target is vulnerable to economic downturns, it is much more resilient than most stocks in such periods. Target is combatting this in part with its massive push towards digital sales channels, which is working.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

We see Target as near fair value on recent strength in the stock, which should provide a fractional tailwind to total returns. Given earnings this year, we see 9% earnings growth going forward. We forecast total returns at 11.5% annually. The yield of 2.8% is off from its highs, and the dividend increase streak is impressive and should provide many more years of payout growth. We're reiterating the stock at a buy rating.
