Overview & Current Events

J.B. Hunt Transport Services (JBHT) is a freight carrier company that primarily operates large semi-trailer trucks (semis). The business operates more than 115,000 pieces of company-owned trailing equipment in its fleet. The business is split into 5 segments – Intermodal (JBI), which operates the largest drayage fleet (vans 53 feet long) in North America, Dedicated Contract Services (DCS), which offers design and implementation of supply chain solutions and on-site management, Integrated Capacity Solutions (ICS), which ships domestic and international containers across North America, Truckload (JBT), which is one of the largest capacity networks in North America, allowing users to GPS track trailers, and Final Mile Services (FMS), which provides final destination delivery and installation. Intermodal is the largest of these divisions, followed by Dedicated Contract Services and Integrated Capacity Solutions. The company enjoyed strong demand for logistics services over the past couple of years as American consumers spent money at a record pace. However, that momentum has now gone into reverse.

On October 15th, 2024, J.B. Hunt reported its Q3 results. The latest earnings report continued the recent downward trend. Revenues of $3.07 billion slipped 3% year-over-year. However, due to falling margins, the result was worse on the bottom line. Operating income of $224 million fell 7% year-over-year and EPS of $1.49 fell sharply from the $1.80 that J.B. Hunt earned in the same period of 2023.

This was the third consecutive quarter of disappointing numbers from J.B. Hunt. Four of the company's five business divisions reported declining revenue this quarter. At the same time, however, J.B. Hunt reported rising costs across personnel, insurance and claims, and equipment-related expenses. Needless to say, the combination of falling revenues and rising overhead has had a worrisome impact on profitability. 2023 was already a sharp dip from J.B. Hunt's 2022 earnings and 2024 is shaping up to be another significant decline in the company's results. Given current trends, we aren't sure that J.B. Hunt can return to earnings growth in 2025, as the trucking industry faces stiff headwinds.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

Year	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2029

Shares	117	114	111	110	109	106	106	105	104	103	103	101

Since 2014, J.B. Hunt has seen its earnings-per-share grow at an average annualized rate of 9.2%. The company had enjoyed unusually rapid earnings growth over the past few years. However, 2023 marked a significant retrenchment from 2022's peak, and 2024 is set to be another year of decline. Once the industry slump bottoms out, we forecast that J.B. Hunt will grow earnings per share at 5.5% per year going forward.

Over the past 5 years, dividend payments have grown at a rate of 10.6% annually. We expect that the dividend growth rate will slow down in-line with the company's earnings growth. To that point, J.B. Hunt's most recent dividend hike, announced in January 2024, was a mere 2% increase.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	Now	2029
Avg. P/E	24.2	22.2	21.6	26.0	20.7	20.0	25.1	23.9	21.0	23.5	29.3	22.0
Avg. Yld.	1.0%	1.0%	1.1%	0.9%	0.8%	1.0%	0.9%	0.7%	0.9%	0.9%	1.0%	1.2%

Over the past 9 years, J.B. Hunt has averaged a P/E ratio of 22.8, and over the past 5 years, the stock has averaged a P/E ratio of 22.7. Shares are trading near their highest multiple of the past decade right now. We do not think that will last, and instead anticipate that the company's P/E ratio will settle at 22.0 in the coming years.

J.B. Hunt has long offered a dividend yield right around the 1.0% mark, and we expect the yield will remain near that level in the coming years.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2029
Payout	25%	23%	23%	25%	17%	20%	23%	17%	17%	24%	28%	26%

J.B. Hunt has averaged a roughly 20% payout ratio over the past decade. We expect it will continue to increase its dividend in line with earnings, leading to a stable payout ratio. Trucking is historically a cyclical industry prone to downturns during a recession. However, J.B. Hunt's diversified lines of business and large scale historically have given it a good deal of insulation from economic shocks as compared to most of its peers.

J.B. Hunt has a fair amount of leverage on its balance sheet. S&P Global rates the company's debt at BBB+. The balance sheet is well within investment-grade parameters, but conditions could change in a more prolonged recession.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Given the economic headwinds and continuing demand shortfalls in the trucking industry, J.B. Hunt faces near-term challenges. J.B. Hunt has reported a number of weak earnings reports in a row. Q3 did not do anything to change this negative trend. Shares have rallied since our last update, which is hard to justify given the continued deterioration in the company's operating results. Forward returns are not favorable from J.B. Hunt's current 29.3x P/E ratio. We see a mere 0.7% total annualized total return outlook, making shares a sell today.
