Valuation Analysis

Year	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	Now	2029
Avg. P/E	12.1	11.8	11.9	21.6	25.8	17.3	12.9	12.1	13.0	13.3	18.4	11.0

F&M is trading at a forward P/E of 18.4, lower than its 10-year and five-year average P/E of 15.2 and 13.7, respectively. Considering the bank’s resiliency, we have assumed a stable P/E of 11.0 to value the stock, slightly lower than its historical averages, as this accounts for the uncertainty attached to the sector. This suggests a target price of $28.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2029
Payout	40%	39%	37%	36%	35%	37%	37%	35%	33%	51%	51%	49%

The company's competitive advantage lies in its longstanding reputation for providing quality financial services to its customers, along with its strong presence in the communities it serves. During the recession of 2008, F&M, performed well due to its conservative lending practices and strong capital position. In general, F&M has a stable dividend payout ratio, and we expect it to hover in the 50% range, which is above its historical average of 38.0%.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

The loan pipeline and the margins are performing better; thus, we anticipate higher earnings-per-share in 2024, especially given that interest rates are expected to support profit growth. Following the banking crisis, the sector outlook remains somewhat uncertain. Following the strong performance of the stock, we downgrade FMAO to sell, premised upon the 0.9% annualized total returns for the medium-term, derived from the forecasted earnings-per-share growth of 8.0%, the 2.8% dividend yield, and a valuation headwind.
