Overview & Current Events

Houlihan Lokey, Inc. (HLI) is a global independent investment bank with expertise in mergers and acquisitions (M&A), capital markets, financial restructurings, and financial and valuation advisory. Founded in 1972, this $10 billion market cap company has raised its dividend for each of the past seven years.

Houlihan Lokey, Inc. reported its fiscal Q2 2025 earnings on October 30th, 2024. For the quarter, earnings-per-share equaled $1.37, which was higher than the $0.99 the company reported in the same period the year before. The company has announced a new $0.57 dividend to be paid on December 15th. This increased dividend is well covered by the company's earnings.

The second quarter results have provided ongoing momentum across all three of the company's business lines. While the management team does recognize uncertainties in the macro environment, the outlook for the second half of fiscal 2025 is positive.

Revenues for the quarter added up to $575 million, above the $467 million for the same quarter in the year before. Revenues in corporate finance increased by 29%, financial restructuring revenues are up 15% and financial valuation advisory are up by 12%.

Houlihan Lokey is an investment bank, and the bulk of its business is related to consulting and other investment advisory services, rather than the trading that some investment banks engage in. This has benefits and drawbacks, over the past couple of years this focus on advisory services has helped them do well, given the increase in mergers, acquisitions and in particular the SPAC boom of 2020.

On the other hand, now that interest rates are rising, and capital isn't as cheap anymore, this boom has begun to stall out, and that will drag down the company's business going forward. While this isn't by any means a deathblow to the company, it does help characterize the cyclicity of the business. The hawkish Federal Reserve and tighter monetary policy could significantly harm the bank's prospects. For these reasons we expect that over the next five years the company's earnings per share will shrink at a rate of around 5% per year, and we estimate that its EPS in 2029 will be around $3.10 per share.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2030
Avg. P/E	--	20.4	16.4	17.0	18.7	17.0	13.6	14.0	21.6	20.9	47.5	13.0
Avg. Yld.	--	1.3%	2.7%	2.0%	2.4%	2.6%	2.1%	1.7%	2.5%	2.6%	1.2%	6.0%

HLI has traditionally traded at around 16 times earnings, however with the more hawkish Federal Reserve constraining their activities going forward, we expect that this ratio will shrink to around 13 times earnings by 2030, in line with its worsening fundamentals.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2030
Payout	--	27%	44%	34%	45%	44%	29%	28%	53%	54%	57%	77%

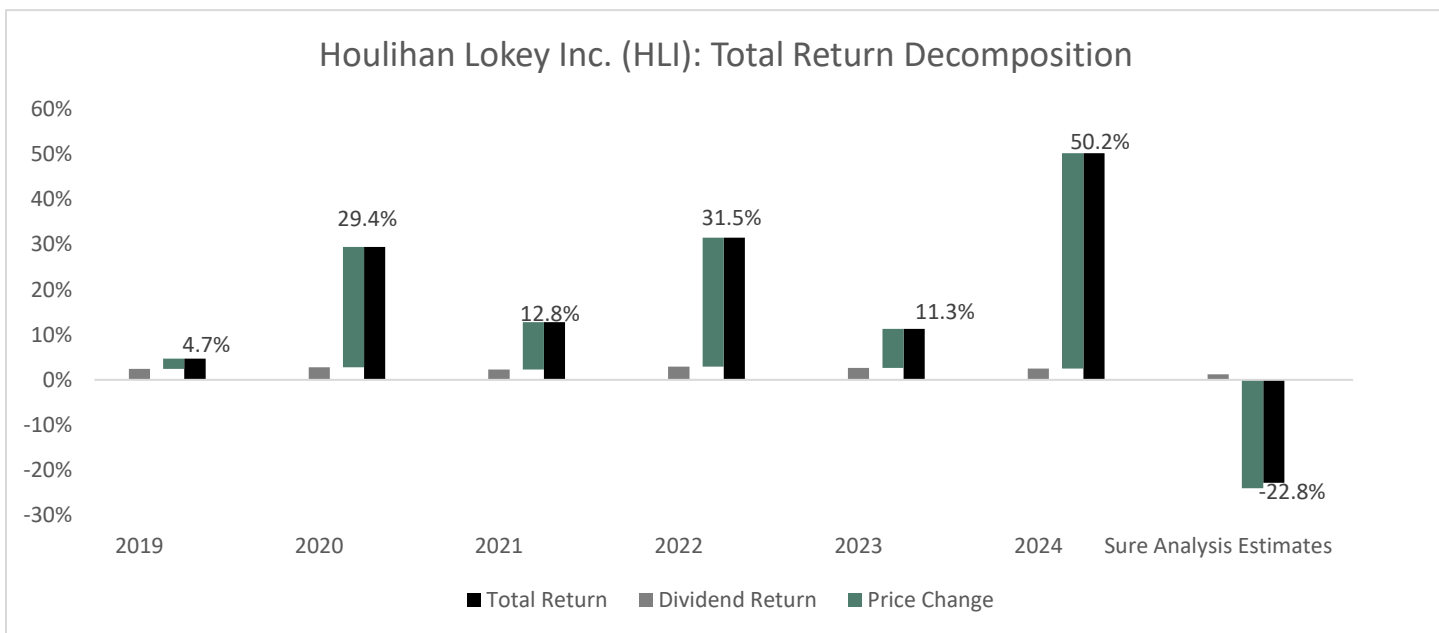

Houlihan Lokey Inc. is a well-established business with global operations and given its focus on advisory services over the traditional trading that many investment banks engage in, they are well positioned for a drawdown in their business, thanks to their lack of leverage. Indeed, leverage is often the cause of investment bank failures, and HLI is almost entirely insulated from such an outcome.

While it is concerning that macro-economic factors are currently moving against the company, the lack of leverage, long term debt commitments and the highly dynamic business model that HLI is engaging in means that they are well prepared to be able to cut costs and maintain profitability even in a difficult economic environment. Their geographical diversification also gives them some optionality going forward.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

With a 1.5% dividend yield, we are forecasting total return loss of 22.8% per annum, driven primarily by a shrinkage of their advisory and M&A business as a result of macro-economic factors and a reversion to the mean. We expect their valuation ratios to decrease in the future; particularly given the difficult environment they are operating in. As a result, HLI shares earn a sell rating.
