Overview & Current Events

Otter Tail Corporation goes back to 1907 with its electric utility, which was founded in Fergus Falls, MN. The company eventually expanded into metal fabrication and plastics manufacturing and today, it generates over $1 billion in annual revenue split between utility, manufacturing and plastics operations. Otter Tail has a $3.3 billion market capitalization.

Otter Tail Corporation (OTTR) reported third-quarter 2024 earnings, with EPS of $2.03, surpassing expectations by $0.11, although revenue declined 5.6% year-over-year to $338.03 million, missing estimates by $39.12 million. Despite a decrease in EPS from the prior year, the company raised its 2024 earnings guidance midpoint by $0.15 to $7.07 per share, reflecting confidence in growth within the electric and plastics segments, as well as continued resilience in the diversified business model. The electric segment showed a 16% earnings increase, supported by interim rate hikes in North Dakota and favorable weather, while a Federal Energy Regulatory Commission ruling positively impacted returns on equity. However, the plastics segment experienced a 7.9% drop in net income due to declining PVC pipe prices, despite rising sales volumes. The manufacturing segment faced a sharp earnings decline of 71%, with weaker demand in recreational vehicles, agriculture, and construction markets impacting sales volumes. The corporation declared a quarterly dividend of $0.4675 per share, payable December 10, 2024. Otter Tail's liquidity remains robust, totaling $544 million, with a strategy to support its rate base growth without additional equity needs.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

Year	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2029
EPS	$1.55	$1.56	$1.60	$1.86	$2.06	$2.15	$2.34	$4.23	$6.78	$7.00	$5.00	$4.25
DPS	$1.21	$1.23	$1.25	$1.28	$1.34	$1.40	$1.48	$1.56	$1.65	$1.75	$1.87	$2.40
Shares¹	37.4	38.0	39.4	39.6	39.7	40.2	41.5	41.6	41.6	41.7	41.8	42

Otter Tail's earnings-per-share history has been fairly strong in the last decade, as earnings bottomed in 2010 and have grown every year since. We see earnings per share declining at a 3.2% annualized pace going forward after a strong jump up in earnings from 2020 to the present level. The company's manufacturing and plastics businesses have benefited from higher order rates as well as a lower income tax rate, while seeing gross margins tick higher over time. The higher operating expenses seen in prior quarters are uncharacteristic for Otter Tail, so we don't see any long-term impairment just yet. We see all of these factors as continuing until further notice and as a result, earnings should decline steadily in the coming years. Otter Tail's full rate case in South Dakota is still pending, but the company has a favorable relationship with its regulators, so we are optimistic that Otter Tail will continue to receive the rate increases it needs to grow revenue.

Otter Tail Corporation (OTTR)

Updated November 8th, 2024 by Samuel Smith

The stock’s price-to-earnings multiple has moved significantly lower in recent years after being artificially inflated due to low earnings-per-share from 2008 to 2011. However, today’s multiple of 15.8 is below its recent historical norm of 20 and above our fair value estimate of 15, and as such, we see the stock as overvalued. We think shares will return to a multiple of roughly 15 over time, producing a headwind to total returns moving forward.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Payout	78%	79%	78%	69%	65%	65%	63%	37%	24%	25%	37%	56%

Otter Tail’s payout ratio is generally around two-thirds of earnings and we don’t expect that will change longer-term. However, bumper earnings this year has the payout ratio much lower temporarily. The company continues to boost its payout at roughly the same rate as earnings, so the dividend is quite safe and should continue to move higher over time. Otter Tail’s competitive advantage of having a diversified business model is also its disadvantage during recessions. The non-utility businesses are providing strong growth today but during the last recession, earnings fell much more than expected for a pure utility. That will likely happen next time there is a downturn, so investors should keep this in mind.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

We see Otter Tail as a stock that offers -1.2% annualized total return potential moving forward along with a safe 2.4% dividend yield that will grow slowly but steadily over time. As a result, it looks like an unattractive investment at the moment, making it a Sell.
