Overview & Current Events

Avnet Inc. (AVT) is a global distributor of electronic components and technology solutions, connecting semiconductors and other components suppliers to customers in 140 countries. Avnet is the third-largest semiconductor distributor in the world and the largest for European chip distribution. The company has two main operating segments: the Electronic Components segment, which sells electrical components, semiconductors, interconnect, passive and electromechanical components, and the Farnell segment, which sells kits, tools, test measurement, and electronic components. The Electronic Components segment is the primary segment of the company, constituting of more than 90% of sales, while the Farnell segment contributes the remainder. The company operates across the Americas, Europe, the Middle East, Africa (EMEA), and Asia/Pacific regions.

On January 29th, 2025, Avnet announced Q2 2025 results, reporting non-GAAP adjusted diluted EPS of $0.87, which missed estimates by $0.01. The company reported revenue of $5.66 billion down 8.7% year-over-year.

The Electronic Components segment achieved an operating income margin of 4.1%, while Farnell, Avnet's high-service distribution business, reported a 4.0% margin. The company generated $274 million in cash flow from operations during the quarter. The company returned $79 million to shareholders through share repurchases, representing 1.6% of shares outstanding, along with $28 million in dividends.

For the full fiscal year 2024, Avnet's sales totaled $23.8 billion, down from $26.5 billion in the prior year. Diluted EPS for the year was $5.43, a decrease from $8.26 previously, with adjusted diluted EPS at $5.34 compared to $8.06 in fiscal 2023. The company maintained an operating income margin of 3.6%, with the Electronic Components segment at 4.3% and Farnell at 4.1%. Avnet generated $690 million in cash flow from operations throughout the year. In terms of shareholder returns, the company repurchased $165 million worth of shares, accounting for 3.6% of shares outstanding, and distributed $112 million in dividends. Looking ahead, Avnet projects first-quarter fiscal 2025 sales between $5.25 billion and $5.55 billion, with diluted EPS expected in the range of $0.80 to $0.90.

Avnet has suffered some recent setbacks that have hurt its profitability and EPS growth. Starting in 2016, the company suffered from a failed implementation of a new ERP system in North America that has prolonged impacted the firm's profitability and efficiency. Management's mistakes and poor execution are reflected in the financials as the EPS dropped from $4.49 in 2015 to $2.02 in 2020. However, the company experienced significant EPS and profitability growth in 2022.

We expect the company to continue its growth, but at a moderate pace, since despite the operational challenges, the company has a robust business model and will continue to do well in the coming years. The company has consistently reported double-digit revenue growth and has surpassed market expectations on EPS. Therefore, we used the midpoint of analysts' EPS estimates of $3.46 for 2025 and expect an annual EPS growth rate of 5.0% over the next five years, leading to our estimated EPS of $4.41 by the end of the fiscal year 2030. Finally, we expect the company to maintain a healthy dividend distribution and forecast a dividend payment of $1.68 in 2030.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	Now	2030
Avg. P/E	9.7	10.0	12.6	11.8	10.5	14.3	14.7	6.2	5.6	10.1	14.5	8.0
Avg. Yld.	0.4%	0.4%	0.4%	0.5%	0.5%	0.7%	0.5%	0.6%	2.5%	2.3%	2.6%	4.8%

Avnet currently trades at a forward P/E of 14.5, higher than its normalized 10-year average P/E of 10.6 and five-year average P/E of 10.2. Even though the company operates in the cyclical sector and earnings growth has not been consistent, we believe it will continue to benefit from the robust demand for its products in the communication and defense market. Hence, a P/E ratio of 8.0 would be a fair reflection of the business, in our view, which results in a five-year price target of $35.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

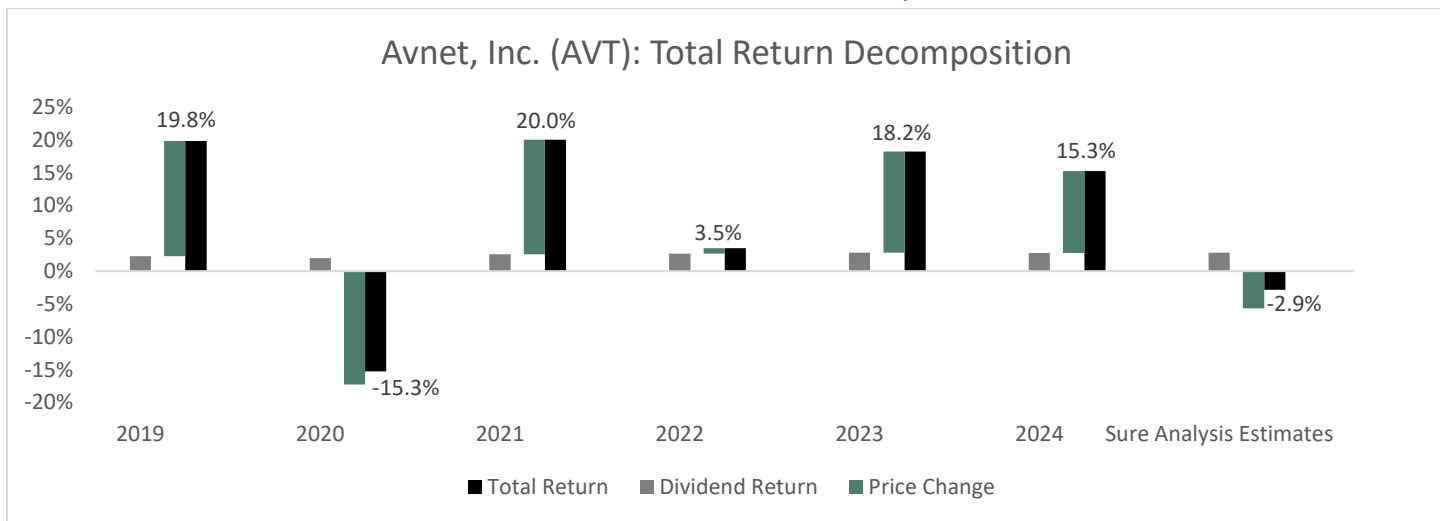

Year	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2030
Payout	4%	4%	6%	5%	5%	10%	8%	4%	14%	23%	38%	38%

Avnet holds a competitive advantage as a global distributor of electronic components and solutions, benefiting from a vast network and industry expertise. Its recession performance has historically demonstrated resilience due to its diversified customer base spanning various sectors. However, its debt levels have fluctuated, impacting financial flexibility. Overall, AVT's competitive positioning and adaptable business model contribute to its stability during economic downturns, although debt management remains crucial for sustained growth. Avnet has paid increasing dividends over the past 11 years, with the payout ratio averaging 8.2%. The company has also been committed to increasing shareholder value by delivering a reliable dividend and continued share repurchases. In fiscal 2024, Avnet repurchased $165 million worth of shares, representing 3.6% of shares outstanding, demonstrating its commitment to returning value to shareholders. In Q2, Avnet repurchased $51 million worth of shares, returning value to shareholders.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Although Avnet has suffered from implementation failures that have impacted its efficiency and profitability, the company remains the third-largest chip distributor globally. Moreover, it holds the top market share in Europe. However, we maintain our rating to sell premised our total annual return projection of -2.9% for the medium-term, derived from the forecasted earnings-per-share growth of 5.0%, a dividend yield of 2.6%, and multiple compression.
