Overview & Current Events

Silgan Holdings manufactures and sells metal and plastic containers, as well as packaging closures. Its containers are found in everyday food consumables such as pet food, fruits and vegetables, and drinks, while its closures are applied to the beverage, garden, and personal care products. The company generates nearly $6.0 billion in annual revenues and is based in Stamford, Connecticut.

On January 29th, 2025, Silgan reported its Q4 and full-year results for the period ending December 31st, 2024. Quarterly revenues rose 5% year-over-year to $1.41 billion.

Specifically, the metal containers segment's sales fell 8% to $610.2 million, with volumes remaining flat year-over-year. The segment saw double-digit growth in pet food markets, largely offset by lower fruit and vegetable volumes due to bad weather that prematurely ended the season, as well as planned reductions by a large pack customer to manage working capital. The dispensing & specialty closures segment posted strong growth, with sales rising by 22% year-over-year to $639.4 million. The increase was primarily driven by the Weener Packaging acquisition, which contributed approximately 19%, alongside organic volume/mix growth of 5%, supported by double-digit gains in dispensing products. Lastly, custom containers posted a 6% revenue increase to $161.6 million, primarily due to a 4% rise in volumes, driven by the commercialization of new business awards and a more favorable price/mix.

Adjusted EPS came in at $0.85, which was above Q4-2023's $0.63. For the full year, adjusted EPS was $3.62. For FY2025, Silgan expects adjusted EPS to land between $4.00 and $4.20. We have utilized the midpoint of the updated range in our estimates. Past figures in our tables reflect GAAP figures, nonetheless.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

Year	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2030
EPS	$1.41	$1.28	$2.44	$2.03	$1.75	$2.79	$3.25	$3.09	$3.00	$2.59	$4.10	$5.49
DPS	$0.32	$0.34	$0.36	$0.40	$0.44	$0.48	$0.56	$0.64	$0.72	$0.76	$0.76	$1.22
Shares²	122.0	119.7	110.4	110.6	110.9	110.7	110.4	110.1	106.6	106.8	106.8	112.0

Over the past decade, Silgan has averaged an EPS and DPS CAGR of 7.0% and 10.1%, respectively. Demand for packaged and canned foods, as well as sanitization products, has historically hovered stable levels. We believe the company will continue to enjoy stable demand over the long term as its containers and dispensing closures are primarily utilized in consumer staple products which in turn also enjoy stable demand.

We retain our EPS CAGR estimate at 6%, pricing in the possibility of a slowdown in earnings growth due to the company gradually maturing, and to be prudent. Share buybacks should mildly aid EPS growth over time. The company's share count has declined by about 12% over the past decade. Silgan repurchased a modest $174.7 million worth of stock last year. Nevertheless, we retain our DPS CAGR forecast at 10% to reflect management's latest bold payout hike and low payout ratio that should afford meaningful payout increases. Silgan has grown its DPS annually for 20 consecutive years.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	Now	2030
Avg. P/E	19.9	20.1	22.6	11.1	17.6	12.5	13.5	13.6	15.5	18.0	13.6	14.5
Avg. Yld.	1.3%	1.3%	1.1%	1.6%	1.5%	1.5%	1.3%	1.5%	1.5%	1.6%	1.4%	1.5%

Silgan's valuation has remained relatively reasonable over the years, rarely outrunning its underlying financial growth. Shares appear modestly undervalued at 13.6 times their FY2025 expected adjusted EPS. The stock's yield has almost always remained relatively low, at around 1% to 2%. Despite the rapid dividend increases, aggregate dividends paid out (as well as buybacks) have remained quite humble as the company reinvests most of its proceeds back into the business.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2030
Payout	23%	27%	15%	20%	25%	17%	17%	21%	24%	29%	19%	22%

Investors can rely on Silgan's dividends since the company's payout ratio has historically remained quite low. It currently stands at 19%. Since the company's IPO in 1996, Silgan has never reported a money-losing quarter. Its products are vital for various consumer staples. Hence, its operations are quite stable, displayed in its 20-year dividend growth record. At the same time, however, Silgan operates in a massively competitive space, with quite thin margins. The company's competitors include firms that are multiple times larger than Silgan, such as the Ball Corp. (BLL), the Packaging Corporation of America (PKG), keeping Silgan's net profit margins in the mid-single-digits.

Overall, we believe that the company has showcased decades of robust cash flow generation, with little volatility to its financials. Its operations should remain relatively stable even under adverse economic conditions. Silgan's financial resiliency is evident by the 2026 senior secured notes issue in the midst of the pandemic, in which the company managed to secure $500 million at an ultra-low rate of 1.4%.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Silgan has a long history of stable returns, with the stock lacking any wild fluctuations in its share price throughout the decades. Combining our relatively modest growth expectations, the dividend yield, and a valuation tailwind, we forecast annualized returns of around 8.7% in the medium-term. Hence, we rate shares as a hold. Regardless, we remind investors that they must be aware of the company's razor-thin net income margins, which could easily be compressed following incompetence in passing inflationary costs through. Failure to do so could impact future returns. The pass-through of costs to Silgan's product pricing has been managed well historically, nonetheless.
