Overview & Current Events

World Kinect Corporation (WKC) is a leading global energy distribution and management company that offers a broad range of solutions across the energy spectrum to more than 150,000 customers worldwide. It generates about half of its revenue in the U.S. and the other half in international markets. Its Land segment offers fuels and lubricants to retail petroleum operators as well as industrial, commercial, residential and government customers. The Marine segment offers similar products to shipping companies while the Aviation segment is focused on commercial, government and military aviation customers. In 2023, the Land, Marine and Aviation segments generated 38%, 16% and 46%, respectively, of the total gross profit of the company. World Kinect was incorporated in Miami, Florida in 1984, and has a market capitalization of $1.7 billion.

In mid-February, World Kinect reported (2/20/24) results for the fourth quarter of 2024. Its Land business continued to face unfavorable conditions due to an oversupplied gas market in Brazil but it improved its performance in North America. However, the Aviation segment was hurt by the sale of Avinode and the marine segment was hurt by lower bunker fuel prices. As a result, total revenue decreased -19% over the prior year's quarter. Earnings-per-share grew 15%, from $0.54 to $0.62, beating the analysts' consensus by $0.12, thanks to a non-recurring charge in Q4-2023. Management expects weak momentum in the first quarter, in line with seasonal patterns in aviation and marine, but it expects an improvement in the rest of the year.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

Shares	71	70	68	68	67	64	63	63	60	58	56	52

Due to its focus on the highly cyclical energy market, World Kinect has exhibited a remarkably volatile performance record over the last decade. Even worse, the company has failed to grow its earnings-per-share over the last decade, as it has been unable to match its strong performance in 2014-2015, which were favorable years for its business.

On the bright side, the company is trying to enhance its operating margin by acquiring smaller companies. In 2022, it acquired Flyers and thus it enhanced its presence in the West Coast while it also improved its margins in its Land segment. World Kinect enhanced its adjusted gross margin from 21% in 2020 to 26% in 2024 and expects to improve it to 30% by 2026. Given also the small market share in its Land (<1%) and Aviation (~10%) segment, the company sees ample room for future growth. We expect 5% average annual growth of earnings-per-share over the next five years.

World Kinect Corporation (WKC)

Updated February 24th, 2025, by Aristofanis Papadatos

Excluding the years in which depressed earnings resulted in abnormally high price-to-earnings ratios, World Kinect has traded with an average price-to-earnings ratio of 14.3 over the last decade. As a cyclical business, World Kinect tends to have higher price-to-earnings ratios during periods of lower earnings, and lower price-to-earnings ratios during periods of higher earnings. We view 14.3 as a fair earnings multiple for this stock, which is now trading at a price-to-earnings ratio of 12.9. If it trades at its fair valuation level in five years, it will enjoy a 2.1% annualized gain in its returns.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2030
Payout	10%	13%	---	13%	13%	23%	41%	25%	29%	31%	28%	33%

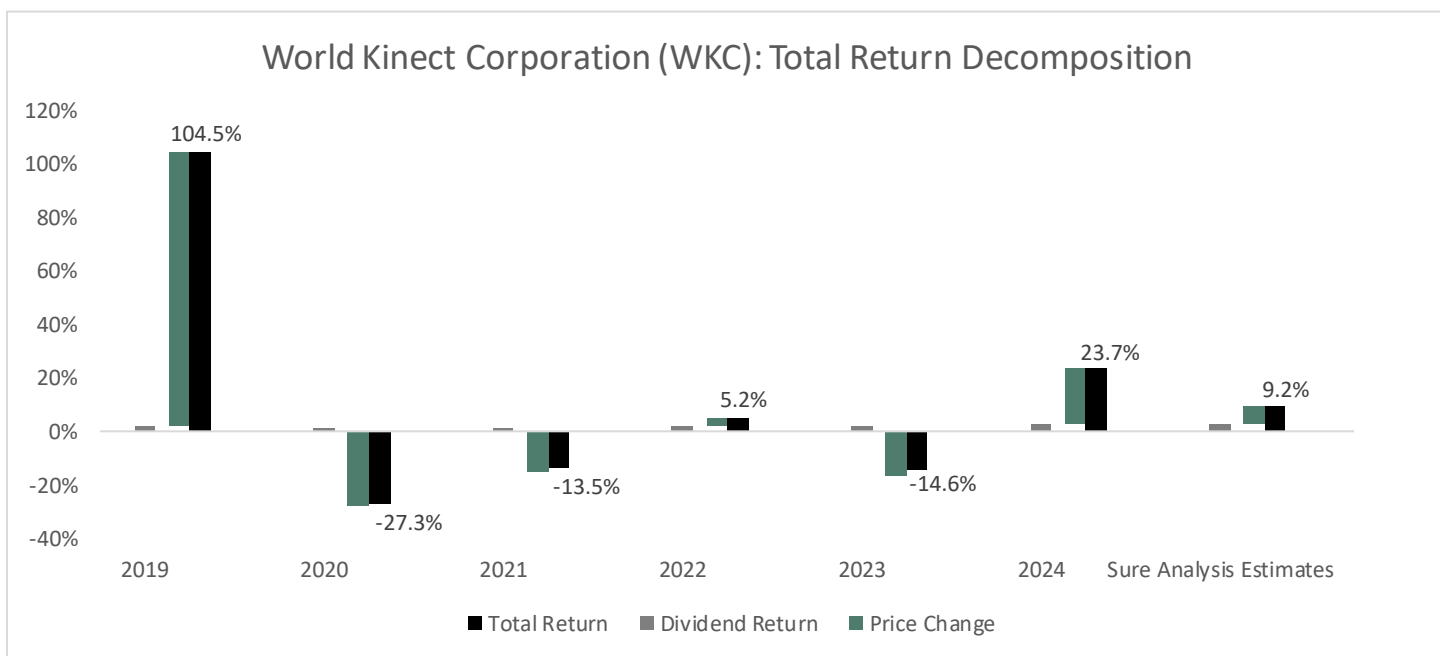

World Kinect has a highly cyclical business and hence it is vulnerable to economic downturns. During the pandemic, it incurred a -36% decrease in earnings-per-share in 2020 and a further -32% decrease in 2021. It also posted material losses in 2017 due to unfavorable conditions in the energy market in that year.

Moreover, we note that the company has a weak balance sheet, with net debt of $2.0 billion, which is 118% the market cap of the stock, and interest expense consuming 41% of operating income. World Kinect can easily service its debt during calm periods but it is likely to come under pressure whenever the next downturn of the energy market shows up. For all these reasons, the stock is not suitable for income-oriented investors. In addition, due to its high cyclical nature, this is not a buy-and-hold-forever stock for any type of investor. As soon as World Kinect approaches our target price, investors should take their profits. The vast underperformance of the stock vs. the S&P 500 over the last decade (-44% vs. +185%) is a testament to the risk of the stock.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

World Kinect has exhibited a lackluster performance record but its future looks brighter thanks to promising growth potential. The stock has rallied 29% in the last 12 months but it could still offer a 9.2% average annual return over the next five years thanks to 5.0% growth of earnings-per-share, its 2.2% dividend and a 2.1% potential valuation tailwind. We marginally lower our rating from "buy" to "hold" but we reiterate that the stock is suitable only for investors who can tolerate the volatility related to the business of the company and the resultant stock price volatility.
