Overview & Current Events

Donaldson has been creating filtration solutions for a wide array of applications since 1915. Its sales consist of filters in various engine and industrial applications as core categories, but continuous innovation and acquisitions have expanded the portfolio. The company is expected to produce about $3.7 billion in revenue this year and trades with a current market capitalization of $8.2 billion.

Donaldson posted second quarter earnings on February 27th, 2025, and results were weaker than expected on both the top and bottom lines. Adjusted earnings-per-share came to 83 cents, missing by two cents. Revenue was off 0.8% year-over-year to $870 million, missing estimates widely by more than $38 million. The company noted sales were negatively impacted by 1.7% from currency translation. This was partially offset by pricing benefits.

Gross margin was 35.2% of revenue, flat compared to the year-ago period, with benefits from input cost deflation, offset by unfavorable sales mix. Operating costs were 20.7% of revenue, up 300 basis points from a year ago. Excluding charges related to restructuring, adjusted operating expenses would have been down 40 basis points to 20% of revenue. Operating income was 15.2% of revenue on an adjusted basis, a gain of 40 basis points year-over-year due to expense leverage.

The company has paid $65 million in dividends so far this year, and repurchased $81 million of common stock.

We see $3.65 in adjusted earnings-per-share for this year, a nickel ahead of our prior estimate.

Donaldson's earnings growth has been inconsistent in the past decade as it is very much beholden to economic conditions around the world. Its customer base is diverse and deep, but growth seems to come in bunches, not in a steady fashion. Looking forward, we are forecasting robust 8% earnings-per-share growth annually. We remain somewhat cautious on the company's ability to grow revenue, as well as expand its margins despite recent pricing increases. However, management is bullish, seeing improvement on the horizon in the near term, and recent results have been supportive of higher revenue and better margins.

The company can grow through a variety of methods. First, sales increases ought to continue from organic growth, pricing increases, and acquisitions, which should amount to mid-single-digit or better growth. We see margin improvement activities as key to the company producing meaningfully higher earnings in the coming years, as well as a rebound in revenue producing leverage on SG&A costs. Margins improved in Q2 once again due primarily to expense management.

Lastly, Donaldson is buying back stock each year. We forecast moderate dividend growth, but Donaldson is not a high-income stock, choosing instead to use its excess cash for acquisitions and share repurchases. Share repurchases are relatively small in any particular year, but over time, add up to meaningful gains for shareholders. With the new authorization, we expect share repurchases to increase. We note repurchases have been modest thus far in 2025.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	Now	2030
Avg. P/E	25.5	21.9	24.9	23.9	24.7	24.2	24.6	18.0	20.7	21.9	18.6	21.0
Avg. Yld.	1.8%	2.2%	1.7%	1.6%	1.5%	1.7%	1.5%	1.8%	1.5%	1.4%	1.6%	1.4%

Donaldson’s price-to-earnings multiple has been remarkably steady in the past decade. However, given where shares are today, we are forecasting a modest tailwind to total returns as shares are below our estimate of fair value. Shares go for 18.6 times earnings today, down on our fair value estimate of 21 times.

We are forecasting the yield to stay flat in the years to come as the payout and valuation increases. This is not a stock one buys for the current yield, as the company’s stated strategy requires the use of excess cash for acquisitions and buybacks.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2030
Payout	44%	48%	41%	38%	38%	41%	37%	33%	32%	30%	30%	30%

Donaldson’s payout ratio remains around 30% of earnings and we expect that is where it will stay for the foreseeable future. As mentioned, Donaldson prefers to use most of its excess cash for acquisitions and a small amount of share repurchases, but it does raise the dividend regularly, as we note a 29-year streak of dividend increases.

Donaldson’s recession performance is somewhat of an issue, as you’d expect for an industrial stock, and earnings will likely fall significantly during the next downturn. It does enjoy the competitive advantage of more than 100 years of experience in its field, as well as a strong history of innovation and a sizable installed customer base.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Donaldson’s stock price is slightly undervalued after second quarter results. We are forecasting total annual returns of 11.9%, consisting of the current 1.6% yield, a +2.4% impact from the valuation, and 8% earnings growth. The stock still offers investors growth potential, but the yield is somewhat low for income investors. We’re reiterating the stock at a buy rating following Q2 results.
