Overview & Current Events

Hamilton Beach Brands is a small cap appliance maker based in Virginia. Founded in 1904, it's grown its portfolio to include a variety of small kitchen appliances, including food processors, coffee makers, air fryers, blenders, and more. It sells under several brands, including its flagship Hamilton Beach and Hamilton Beach Professional brands, Proctor Silex, Wolf Gourmet, CHI, Bartsian, and TrueAir. Hamilton Beach distributes its products through mass merchandisers, e-commerce retailers, national department store chains, drug stores, and more. The company has a seven-year streak of dividend increases, and has a market cap of just $253 million.

Hamilton Beach posted fourth quarter and full-year earnings on February 26th, 2025, and results were quite good to end the year. Total revenue was up $7 million, or 3.3%, to $214 million. Revenue growth was reflective of higher volume and favorable product mix, which were partially offset by pricing declines and forex translation. The North America Consumer markets saw higher revenue driven by growth in the US. The Global Commercial market saw lower revenue on softness in international markets. The acquisition of HealthBeacon added $1.7 million of revenue in the fourth quarter.

Gross profit was $55.8 million, or 26.1% of revenue. These were compared to $55.3 million, or 26.8% of revenue a year ago. The decline in margins was primarily attributed to planned price decreases following the realization of lower input costs. Management noted margins were still high on a historical basis.

Operating profit was $23.6 million, off from $25 million. Interest expense declined to $0.3 million from $0.4 million a year ago, primarily due to lower average borrowings.

The company ended the year with $2.20 in adjusted earnings-per-share in 2024, and we see a modest bump to earnings for this year based upon guidance for mid-single digit revenue gains in 2025.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

Hamilton Beach's history of earnings growth is spotty at best. The company sells largely consumer discretionary products; things that are intended to make consumers' life easier, but are not strictly necessary. As such, it is subject to periods of earnings weakness, especially during recessions. Despite the fact that earnings have barely budged over the past decade, Hamilton Beach has remained solidly profitable throughout.

We see just 2% earnings-per-share growth annually moving forward as we see modest sales growth potentially partially offset by stagnant-to-lower profit margins. The upside in earnings growth for the company in the past decade has been modest, while downturns are much harsher. Unless the company's organic revenue growth rate improves materially, we see little upside to earnings estimates for the foreseeable future.

The dividend has been raised every year since inception in 2017, so the growth record there is good. We see growth in the dividend given the low payout ratio, amounting to 4% annually from here.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	Now	2030
Avg. P/E	---	---	14.1	12.9	11.9	9.9	13.1	7.8	13.8	7.8	8.1	11.0
Avg. Yld.	---	---	0.5%	2.6%	2.5%	2.1%	2.2%	1.8%	1.7%	2.7%	2.5%	2.0%

Hamilton Beach's price-to-earnings ratio has been pretty stable most years, with the exception of 2022 when bumper earnings drove the P/E ratio lower. Although the stock's average forward price-to-earnings ratio is near 12, we assess fair value at 11 given the weak outlook for earnings growth. Should that forecasted growth pick up, we'd reassess, but years of stagnant earnings means we believe investors are unlikely to pay elevated multiples.

The yield is market-beating at 2.5%, but it's hardly a pure income stock. We see the yield potentially declining to 2% over time from the current 2.5% as growth in the dividend may outpace that of earnings.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2030
Payout	---	---	7%	20%	33%	21%	26%	23%	24%	21%	20%	22%

The payout ratio is quite low, coming in at 20% for this year. We do see it rising modestly with our forecasted dividend growth, to 22% of earnings by 2030. That's still very safe, and we see no reason that Hamilton Beach won't continue to raise its dividend for many years to come.

Net debt stood at $42 million as of the end of the third quarter, so it's quite manageable given the company's ~$65 million in free cash flow for the past 12 months. Debt servicing costs remain very low, so we have no concern about Hamilton Beach's balance sheet, or ability to pay off and/or refinance its current debt.

Recessions are likely to be unkind to the company's revenue and earnings, although it wasn't publicly-traded the last time we had a typical recession. The COVID recession was brief and caused by a short-lived shock to the economy, and Hamilton Beach was highly profitable throughout. We have doubts that would repeat in a consumer spending-led slowdown.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Hamilton Beach offers investors exposure to targeted consumer discretionary product lines, but we have some doubt about its ability to grow in the coming years. We see 2% earnings-per-share growth and a 6.2% tailwind from the valuation, aided by the 2.5% dividend yield. With 10.2% forecasted annual total returns, we boost the stock to buy.
