Overview & Current Events

The Toro Company was founded in 1914 as an engine manufacturer, providing power to early tractors. The company quickly shifted focus to mowers and in the century since, it has grown to a market capitalization of $7.3 billion and generates $4.6 billion in annual revenue. Toro operates in North America as well as internationally, with three quarters of total revenue coming from the U.S.

In January 2022, Toro acquired the Intimidator Group. The acquisitions added the complementary Spartan line of professional zero-turn mowers to Toro's roster. The addition of the Intimidator Group to Toro's business positions them well to gain customers and geographic exposure.

On December 10th, 2024, Toro increased its dividend for the 16th consecutive year, by 5.6% to $0.38 per share quarterly.

Toro reported first quarter 2025 results on March 6th, 2025. Q1 net sales declined 1% year-over-year to $995 million. Adjusted earnings per diluted share increased by one penny to $0.65 and adjusted operating margin for the quarter was 9.4% compared to 9.2% in the same prior-year period.

Leadership reaffirmed its fiscal 2025 outlook, guiding for 0% to 1% net sales growth, and adjusted EPS of $4.25 to $4.40, however this doesn't take into account any new tariffs for the year.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

Toro's earnings-per-share had moved higher every year from 2009 until 2024, an impressive feat that not many companies can claim. Indeed, it has managed to grow earnings at an average rate of 9.9% annually since 2015, although the past five years have seen 6.8% annual growth. Toro has managed to grow both organically and through acquisitions over the years, and we see that continuing with average annual earnings-per-share growth of 4.0% moving forward.

Toro will achieve this growth with new acquisitions, like its recent purchase of Intimidator Group and Left Hand Robotics, and previously Charles Machine Works, as well as organic sales increases. We see single digit sales increases as reasonable in a normalized environment along with a small tailwind from buybacks. Additionally, higher volume and acquisition synergies should produce further downward pressure on SG&A costs as a percentage of revenue. In first quarter 2024, Toro announced Amplifying Maximum Productivity (AMP), its multi-year initiative, which would result in $100 million of annualized cost savings expected by fiscal 2027. By the end of Q1 2025, AMP had achieved $64 million in run-rate cost savings, and was on track for its 2027 goal.

The company is prioritizing investments in technology areas such as alternative power, smart connected and autonomous to ensure it can achieve future growth. Toro's historical levels of growth as well as its recent performance are both strong indicators of more earnings upside in the coming years.

We see the dividend growing at a 6% rate, moving up to $2.03 annually from the current $1.52. Toro may be an income stock one day but will not likely be anytime soon; growth is the priority, and it is working.

Valuation Analysis

|-----------|------|------|------|------|------|------|------|------|------|------|------|------|
| Avg. P/E | 19.0 | 20.6 | 25.9 | 22.3 | 23.8 | 28.4 | 29.0 | 25.0 | 24.1 | 21.4 | 16.9 | 21.0 |
| Avg. Yld. | 1.5% | 1.4% | 1.1% | 1.3% | 1.3% | 1.3% | 1.0% | 1.0% | 1.3% | 1.6% | 2.1% | 1.9% |

Toro's price-to-earnings multiple is below our estimate of fair value today at 16.9 times earnings based on our 2025 forecast. We therefore see a tailwind of 4.4% to total annual returns from an expanding valuation over time. We see the yield remaining roughly where it is today as the dividend keeps pace with stock price appreciation.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

| Year | 2015 | 2016 | 2017 | 2018 | 2019 | 2020 | 2021 | 2022 | 2023 | 2024 | 2025 | 2030 |
| Payout | 28% | 29% | 29% | 30% | 30% | 33% | 29% | 29% | 32% | 33% | 35% | 39% |

The payout ratio remains about a third of earnings, so the dividend is safe and should continue to grow in the years to come. However, Toro is much more interested in investing for growth than it is in becoming an income stock, so we see the yield remaining around 1.0% to 2.0% for the foreseeable future.

Toro's competitive advantage is its 100-year history in the mowing business. Its reputation and brand are respected and valued in the marketplace, and it remains a powerful player in its niche. That will not save it from economic downturns as the Great Recession certainly took its toll on earnings, but the recovery was swift and strong. While sales did drop a bit during the second quarter of 2020, third and fourth quarter TTC revenue increased, and we saw only a small COVID-19 impact on the business.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Toro has underperformed the S&P 500 Index year-to-date, with its share price declining 9% compared to a 4% loss. We are now forecasting total annual returns of 10.4% for the next five years, stemming from the current 2.1% dividend yield, 4.0% EPS growth, and 4.4% P/E multiple expansion. Toro would not be appropriate for investors seeking a strong current yield or deep value, but the stock has an impressive earnings growth history. Toro earns a buy rating.
