Overview & Current Events

L'Oréal is one of the largest cosmetic conglomerates in the world with a portfolio of 36 household brands. The French company offers shampoos, hair and skincare products, shower gels, cleansers, styling and make-up products, perfumes, and other related goods, through some of the most recognized brands in the world. These include Garnier, Maybelline New York, Giorgio Armani Beauty, Kiehl's, Urban Decay, Biotherm, and Ralph Lauren. L'Oréal generates over $45 billion in annual sales and is based in Paris, France. All figures in this report have been converted to USD unless otherwise noted.

On February 3rd, 2025, L'Oréal agreed to sell 29.6 million of its Sanofi shares to Sanofi for €101.5 each for €3 billion. After the transaction and share cancellation, L'Oréal will hold 7.2% of Sanofi's share capital and 13.1% of its voting rights.

On February 6th, 2025, L'Oréal increased its dividend by 6.1% (in constant currency) to €7.00, which currently equates to $7.98. The final USD amount is subject to shift based on the EUR/USD rate until the payment date. Moreover, the loyalty bonus (see below) will increase the payout by 10%, bringing it to €7.70, with a correspondingly higher amount in USD.

On April 17th, 2025, L'Oréal released its Q1 results for the period ending March 31st, 2025. For the quarter, sales came in at $12.7 billion, up 3.5% on a like-for-like basis (same product structure and constant currency) compared to the same period last year, powered by strong growth across all segments.

Division-wise, the Consumer division saw its sales grow by 2.3% year-over-year. Momentum was well balanced across volume, price, and mix, as the division pursued its strategy to democratize and "premiumize" the mass beauty market. Professional Products, L'Oréal Luxe, and Dermatological Beauty divisions increased their sales by 1.6%, 5.8%, and 2.7%, respectively, retaining a robust momentum.

The company did not report bottom-line metrics (only does so in its H1 and full-year report). However, we have raised our FY2025 estimate to $14.91 due to the Euro's depreciation against the dollar.

L'Oréal's EPS and DPS, as shown in the table, have both been affected by FX over the past decade when expressed in U.S. dollars. The company's EPS and DPS have grown by around 14.0% and 10.3% over the last five years, respectively. Earnings should keep growing at a strong pace, powered by organic growth, price increases, and the gross profit margin expansion due to L'Oréal's economies of scale. The company is a consumer staples behemoth not only in Europe, but also globally, enjoying massive scale capabilities that can dominate global demand trends. We are forecasting a 10% intermediate growth rate, assuming no impacts from FX. Dividends are paid once annually. L'Oréal boasts one of the longest dividend growth records amongst European firms, with its latest dividend increase of 6.1% marking 25 years of annual increases (in Euros). The company offers a unique perk to its long-term shareholders. Those holding shares for at least two calendar years receive a 10% "loyalty bonus" on the original dividend. We are forecasting DPS growth of around 8.5% through 2030.

Valuation Analysis

|-----------|------|------|------|------|------|------|------|------|------|------|------|------|
| Avg. P/E | 27.4 | 29.9 | 27.3 | 30.9 | 37.4 | 41.1 | 41.5 | 28.8 | 32.1 | 35.5 | 25.4 | 26.0 |
| Avg. Yld. | 1.9% | 2.0% | 2.0% | 1.8% | 1.5% | 1.5% | 1.3% | 1.9% | 1.7% | 1.7% | 2.1% | 1.9% |

L'Oréal has traded at elevated multiples over the past decade, reflecting investors' willingness to pay a premium for its qualities, market dominance, and growth. The company's "loyalty bonus" discourages share sales, further contributing to sustained valuation premiums. That said, the valuation has normalized recently. In fact, we believe the stock is slightly undervalued at its current levels. We are still utilizing a more reasonable P/E of 26 in our estimates, which we believe is a fair multiple for the French giant.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

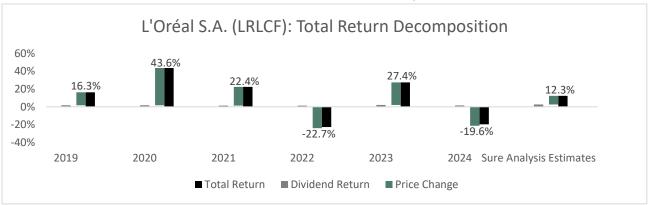

| Year | 2015 | 2016 | 2017 | 2018 | 2019 | 2020 | 2021 | 2022 | 2023 | 2024 | 2025 | 2030 |
| Payout | 53% | 60% | 56% | 56% | 58% | 63% | 58% | 57% | 57% | 59% | 54% | 50% |

L'Oréal's dividend should be considered very safe. The company benefits from consistent profitability, which allowed it to keep raising its payout even during the Great Financial Crisis. The payout ratio currently stands at a healthy level of 54%. L'Oréal's competitive advantage lies in its sheer size, which has resulted in the company accumulating a significant market share. Its companies have massive brand values, generating consistent sales globally. Hence investors should expect a relatively stable performance even under a harsh recession, as was the case during 2007-2008. The company proved totally insulated during the COVID-19 pandemic as well. Finally, L'Oréal has a pristine balance sheet, with its long-term debt/equity ratio standing at 20.1%.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

L'Oréal is one of the most respected European stocks, featuring an incredibly consistent record of shareholder returns. The company's capital returns have been growing for years without interruption, while its "loyalty bonus" program has been a phenomenal strategy to reduce share price fluctuations over time. Total return potential comes in at 12.3% per annum, driven by 10% growth in earnings, the 2.1% dividend yield, and a potential 0.4% annual valuation tailwind. It's worth noting that France applies a considerable dividend withholding tax of 30% under typical circumstances, which could hamper our expected returns. Still, L'Oréal earns a buy rating.
