Overview & Current Events

Since its founding and initial public offering in 2013, CT Real Estate Investment Trust has gone on to become one of Canada's largest retail REITs. The company was formed as part of a spinoff of Canadian retailer and vehicle service company Canadian Tire's real estate assets (beginning with the initial transfer of 256 properties). Canadian Tire (CDNTF) has owned a controlling stake in CTRRF throughout the latter's corporate history.

As of March 31st, 2025, CTRRF owned 377 properties and 31 million square feet of gross leasable area throughout Canada, with the majority being concentrated in Ontario (145) and Quebec (79). The fair market value for these properties was estimated to be 7.3 billion CAD at the time. Unsurprisingly, the close relationship with Canadian Tire means that more than 90% of annualized base rent is derived from the company.

The appeal to this concentration is that the retailer has been in business for more than a century and enjoys a 100% brand recognition rate in Canada. With nearly 12 million active Triangle Rewards loyalty members, Canadian Tire knows how to leverage its brand recognition. Approximately a quarter of Canadian Tire's properties are owned by third parties, so consolidating these represents one growth avenue for CTRRF. Another growth catalyst for the company is the 891,000 square feet of ongoing development activity totaling 331 million CAD as of March 31st.

On May 5th, CTRRF released its first-quarter earnings report for the period ending March 31st, 2025. The company's property revenue in native currency grew by 4.3% over the year-ago period to 150.4 million during the quarter. Factoring in currency translation, CTRRF's property revenue increased by 1.4% year-over-year to $106.4 million in the quarter. Annual rent escalators and an uptick in gross leasable area more than offset the 10-basis-point decrease in the occupancy rate over the year-ago period to 99.4% for the quarter. In CAD, CTRRF's AFFO per unit rose by 3.9% year-over-year to 0.32. Adjusting for foreign currency translation, the company's AFFO per unit edged 1% higher over the year-ago period to $0.227. On the same day, CTRRF also announced a 2.5% increase in its monthly distribution per unit to 0.07903 CAD, representing its 12th consecutive year of distribution growth.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

Year	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2030

Since 2015, CTRRF's AFFO per unit has compounded by 3.5% annually. In more recent years, AFFO per unit has marginally grown. Moving forward, we believe that the REIT's AFFO per unit will compound by about 1.5% each year. That's because CTRRF has plenty of projects with Canadian Tire that are currently in development. Along with further consolidation of third-party Canadian Tire locations and annual lease escalators, this should more than cancel out the continued deterioration of the CAD against the USD in the years ahead.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2030
Avg. P/AFFO	15.0	17.7	15.8	14.6	15.4	15.1	15.3	13.3	12.2	11.6	12.1	13.0
Avg. Yld.	5.5%	4.5%	4.7%	5.5%	4.8%	4.9%	5.0%	5.9%	6.0%	6.7%	6.2%	5.7%

CTRRF's P/AFFO ratio has ranged from as little as the low-double-digits to as much as the high-teens over the last decade. This works out to an average P/AFFO ratio of 14.6. Given that 10-year U.S. Treasury yields will likely remain higher than they have over the last decade, we believe that fair value is one standard deviation below the 10-year average. This would equate to a P/AFFO ratio of approximately 13. Relative to the current multiple of 12.1, shares are slightly discounted.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2030
Payout	83%	80%	74%	80%	74%	74%	77%	78%	73%	78%	75%	75%

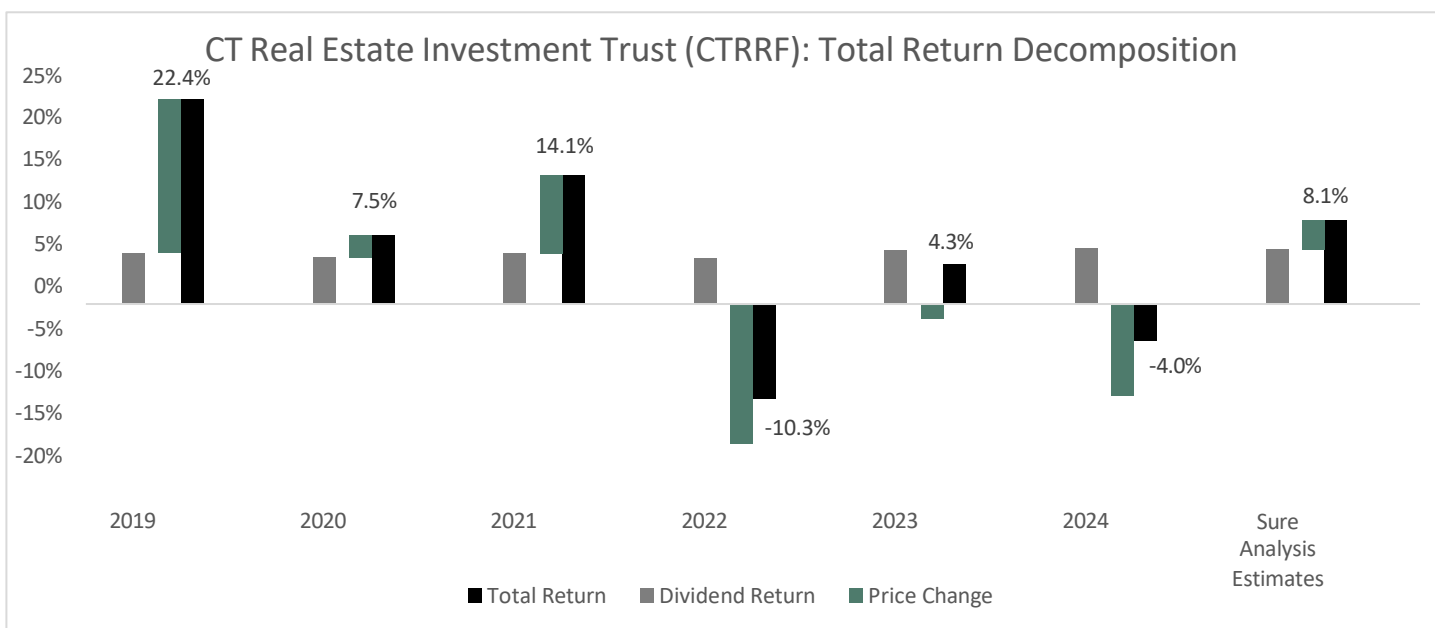

CTRRF's strategic partnership with Canadian Tire is a unique competitive advantage. The company can acquire new stores or distribution centers, often without having to compete with others on the open market. That tends to lead to favorable terms.

Another strength of CTRRF is its robust balance sheet. The company's indebtedness ratio as of March 31st, 2025, was 40.3%. The company also had 301 million CAD in cash and an uncommitted revolving credit facility of 233 million CAD at its disposal. Thus, S&P and the Canadian rating agency DBRS award investment-grade, BBB credit ratings on stable outlooks. CTRRF's distribution is also reasonably well-covered, with it expected to be 75% in 2025. This should give it room to build on its 12-year distribution growth streak in the native currency.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

CTRRF's 6.2% yield, 1.5% annual AFFO per unit growth, and 1.4% annual valuation multiple upside could generate 8.1% annual total returns over the medium term. As a result, we're maintaining our hold rating.
