Overview & Current Events

Lancaster Colony has been making food products since 1969, after shifting away from housewares. The move has afforded the company some meaningful growth in the past five decades and the stock has a $4.6 billion market capitalization on about $2 billion in annual revenue. Lancaster Colony makes various meal accessories like croutons and bread products in frozen and non-frozen categories. Lancaster also has one of the best dividend increase streaks in the entire market, with more than six decades of consecutive increases.

Lancaster posted third quarter earnings on April 30th, 2025, and results were much worse than expected, including very weak guidance for the coming quarters. Adjusted earnings-per-share came to $1.54, which was four cents light of estimates. Revenue was off 3% year-on-year to $458 million, missing estimates by an astonishing $26 million.

Management noted a 'challenging consumer environment' during the quarter, including reduced traffic in the foodservice channel, and softening of demand in the retail channel.

Retail segment sales were off 2.6% year-over-year to $242 million. This included the exit of the company's perimeter-of-store bakery production lines last year. Without that, retail sales would have fallen 0.7%. Foodservice segment sales were off 3.2% to $216 million.

Consolidated operating income was up $15 million to $50 million for the quarter. Gross margins were higher and SG&A costs fell, helping offset weak revenue.

We've slightly reduced our estimate of earnings for this year to $6.70 per share with one quarter remaining.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

Year	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2030

Shares²	27	27	27	28	28	28	28	28	28	28	28	28

The company's earnings-per-share growth has been spotty as its revenue tends to ebb and flow with restaurant traffic. It recovered nicely from the Great Recession, but the drop in 2008 earnings was very steep. We note the COVID recession saw Lancaster's retail and foodservice diversification come into its own as foodservice demand essentially disappeared.

We are forecasting 5% earnings-per-share growth annually ahead, comprised of low single-digit sales and growing margins over time, with the caveat that margins are generally volatile. Lancaster does not buy back stock. The company's average revenue growth has been and should remain in the low single-digits, but keep in mind the possibility for earnings volatility going forward - there will be years where it dips and other years where it may rise rapidly, as it did in 2018, and again in 2019. Organic growth has been a problem for Lancaster Colony, but it does complete sizable acquisitions regularly. After a decline in earnings in 2020, Lancaster has failed to get back near its prior highs in terms of earnings. We believe the company has a very strong chance to set record earnings again in 2025.

We are forecasting modest dividend growth annually for the next five years as Lancaster Colony continues its impressive streak of payouts to shareholders; the payout could be $5.09 per share in five years. Lancaster is not a strong income stock, but it does prioritize growth in the payout each year, and that should continue. The company raised the dividend in November 2024 for the 62nd consecutive year, a streak we expect to continue indefinitely.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	Now	2030
Avg. P/E	24.5	24.3	31.2	31.4	28.8	30.0	35.0	29.4	42.2	30.5	24.9	28.0
Avg. Yld.	2.0%	1.8%	1.6%	1.7%	1.6%	1.8%	1.7%	2.4%	1.7%	1.9%	2.3%	2.1%

The stock’s price-to-earnings ratio has spent the past few years around 30, but given the company’s exposure to restaurants, we see fair value at 28 times earnings. Today, shares trade for 24.9 times our fiscal 2025 earnings estimate, so we see it as undervalued for now.

We see the yield remaining about where it is today given the forecasted moves in the valuation, earnings, and payout. Lancaster’s current yield remains better than the S&P 500.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2030
Payout	47%	49%	44%	47%	47%	55%	48%	72%	71%	57%	57%	59%

Lancaster Colony’s payout should remain near where it is today as dividend growth roughly matches earnings growth. Given its Dividend King status, we know the payout is important to management and the dividend is very safe.

Lancaster Colony’s competitive advantage is in its leadership position within the niche categories in which it competes. The company goes after accessory categories like bread, dressings, and croutons where competition tends to be lighter. It also has strong distribution partnerships with companies like Walmart and McLane Company, a major restaurant distributor. Its recession performance track record is spotty because it is reliant upon restaurant traffic, something that suffers mightily during times of economic stress and input cost inflation.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

We forecast Lancaster Colony to provide shareholders with total annualized returns of 9.4% over the next five years, comprised of 5% growth, a 2.3% dividend yield, and a 2.4% tailwind from the valuation. We’re moving the stock from hold to buy after Q3 results, partially on the company’s exemplary dividend history.
