Growth on a Per-Share Basis

As the chart above illustrates, while SAMG's earnings per share have experienced some volatility from year to year, the overall trend has been strongly higher over time. This strong earnings growth has enabled management to consistently grow its dividend each year for several years now. Moreover, with the expected payout ratio for 2024 being over 50%, it appears that SAMG is poised to continue growing its dividend per share for years to come, though it will likely be at a pace that is slower than our expected 15.1% earnings-per-share CAGR for the company through 2030.

Silvercrest Asset Management Group Inc. (SAMG)

Updated May 18th, 2025 by Samuel Smith

Silvercrest Asset Management Group is currently trading at a P/E ratio of 13.5, well below its 10-year historical average of approximately 15-17. This suggests the stock is undervalued, potentially reflecting investor concerns over market volatility or earnings growth sustainability. The dividend yield of 5.4% remains attractive and higher than historical levels, indicating that the stock may be priced conservatively relative to its income potential. If earnings remain stable and market sentiment improves, the P/E multiple could revert to 12-14 over the next five years. If growth accelerates, valuation could expand further, but sustained market weakness may limit upside potential.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2030
Payout	62%	56%	51%	43%	51%	34%	49%	63%	51%	71%	73%	41%

Silvercrest benefits from a competitive advantage in the wealth management industry, serving high-net-worth clients with a strong reputation for personalized service. The company’s recurring revenue model, based on assets under management, provides stability, though market downturns can impact earnings. During economic recessions and financial crises, SAMG’s performance is tied to market fluctuations, as declining asset values reduce fee income. However, its focus on ultra-high-net-worth clients provides some insulation against volatility. The company has demonstrated resilience through past downturns, managing expenses effectively and maintaining strong client retention. Its niche positioning in a competitive industry ensures long-term revenue durability.

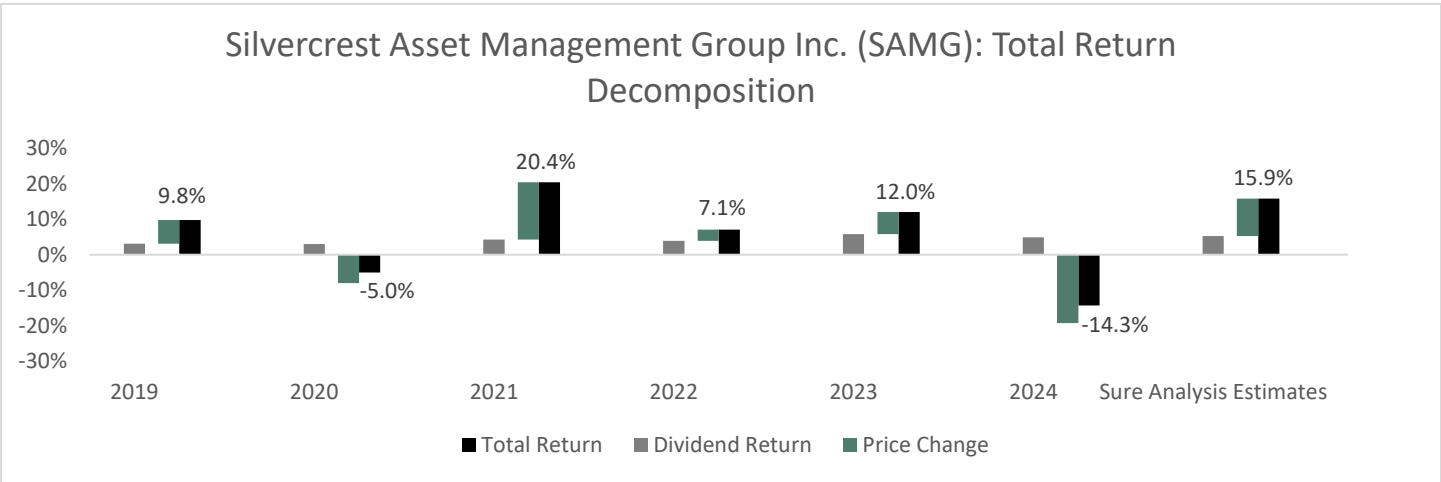

SAMG maintains a strong balance sheet with minimal debt, ensuring financial stability and reducing interest rate risk. The company’s capital-light business model allows it to operate with low financial leverage while generating consistent cash flows. Strong interest coverage ensures that SAMG can continue funding dividends and potential growth initiatives without excessive reliance on external financing. Its financial strength positions it well to withstand market downturns and sustain long-term profitability. If earnings remain stable and assets under management grow, SAMG could see further improvements in its financial flexibility, supporting potential expansion opportunities while maintaining a disciplined capital allocation strategy.

SAMG’s dividend payout ratio is moderate, supporting sustainability while leaving room for reinvestment. Given its strong cash flow generation, the company should maintain dividend stability.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Between SAMG’s 5.4% dividend yield, expected 15.1% CAGR over the next 5 years, and expected -2.3% valuation multiple compression per year over that same period, we expect a 15.9% total return CAGR over the next half decade, but the F dividend risk score makes it a Hold.
