Overview & Current Events

Donaldson has been creating filtration solutions for a wide array of applications since 1915. Its sales consist of filters in various engine and industrial applications as core categories, but continuous innovation and acquisitions have expanded the portfolio. The company is expected to produce about $3.8 billion in revenue this year and trades with a current market capitalization of $9.4 billion.

Donaldson posted fourth quarter and full-year earnings on August 27th, 2025, and results were better than expected on both the top and bottom lines. Adjusted earnings-per-share came to $1.03, which was a penny ahead of estimates. Revenue was up 4.8% year-on-year to $981 million, beating estimates by $29.4 million. Shares jumped to an all-time high following the report.

Gross margin contracted from 35.8% of revenue to 34.5%, weighed by tariffs and inventory valuation headwinds. Adjusted operating margin was 10 basis points lower to 15.5% of revenue despite the increase in revenue. Interest expense was higher as well, weighing on profitability.

The company returned $95 million to shareholders through buybacks and dividends during the fourth quarter. We've started fiscal 2026 at an estimated $4.00 in adjusted earnings-per-share based on a very strong 2025, and guidance for this year. Donaldson continues to set records for earnings and we expect this year to be no different.

Donaldson's earnings growth has been inconsistent in the past decade as it is very much beholden to economic conditions around the world. Its customer base is diverse and deep, but growth seems to come in bunches, not in a steady fashion. Looking forward, we are forecasting robust 8% earnings-per-share growth annually. We remain somewhat cautious on the company's ability to grow revenue, as well as expand its margins despite recent pricing increases. However, management is bullish, seeing improvement on the horizon in the near term, and recent results have been supportive of higher revenue and better margins.

The company can grow through a variety of methods. First, sales increases ought to continue from organic growth, pricing increases, and acquisitions, which should amount to mid-single-digit or better growth. We see margin improvement activities as key to the company producing meaningfully higher earnings in the coming years, as well as a rebound in revenue producing leverage on SG&A costs.

Lastly, Donaldson is buying back stock each year. We forecast moderate dividend growth, but Donaldson is not a high-income stock, choosing instead to use its excess cash for acquisitions and share repurchases. Share repurchases are relatively small in any particular year, but over time, add up to meaningful gains for shareholders. With the new authorization, we expect share repurchases to increase. We note repurchases were strong again in fiscal 2025.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	Now	2031
Avg. P/E	21.9	24.9	23.9	24.7	24.2	24.6	18.0	20.7	21.9	19.6	20.3	21.0
Avg. Yld.	2.2%	1.7%	1.6%	1.5%	1.7%	1.5%	1.8%	1.5%	1.4%	1.6%	1.5%	1.4%

Donaldson’s price-to-earnings multiple has been remarkably steady in the past decade. However, given where shares are today, we are forecasting a modest tailwind to total returns as shares are below our estimate of fair value. Shares go for 20.3 times earnings today, down on our fair value estimate of 21 times.

We are forecasting the yield to stay flat in the years to come as the payout and valuation increases. This is not a stock one buys for the current yield, as the company’s stated strategy requires the use of excess cash for acquisitions and buybacks.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2026	2031
Payout	48%	41%	38%	38%	41%	37%	33%	32%	30%	31%	30%	29%

Donaldson’s payout ratio remains around 30% of earnings and we expect that is where it will stay for the foreseeable future. As mentioned, Donaldson prefers to use most of its excess cash for acquisitions and a small amount of share repurchases, but it does raise the dividend regularly, as we note a 30-year streak of dividend increases.

Donaldson’s recession performance is somewhat of an issue, as you’d expect for an industrial stock, and earnings will likely fall significantly during the next downturn. It does enjoy the competitive advantage of more than 100 years of experience in its field, as well as a strong history of innovation and a sizable installed customer base.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Donaldson’s stock price is still undervalued after fiscal 2025 results. We are forecasting total annual returns of 10.1%, consisting of the current 1.5% yield, a +0.7% impact from the valuation, and 8% earnings growth. The stock still offers investors growth potential, but the yield is somewhat low for income investors. We’re reiterating the stock at a buy rating following 2025 results given its three-decade dividend history and strong prospective returns.
