Overview & Current Events

National Bank of Canada (or simply National Bank) is the sixth-largest bank in Canada behind the Big Five banks with Royal Bank of Canada (RY) and Toronto-Dominion Bank (TD) sitting at the top of the rankings. National Bank's historical roots go as far back as 1859. Since 1993, it has maintained or increased its dividend per share every year in CAD$. Its fiscal 2024 adjusted revenue diversification is as follows: 39% Personal & Commercial Banking, 26% Financial Markets, 23% Wealth Management, and 12% U.S. Specialty Finance & International. All figures in this report are in U.S. dollars unless otherwise specified.

The bank reported stable results for fiscal Q3 2025 on 8/27/2025 across its businesses, including the effects of the Canadian Western Bank acquisition. For the quarter, National Bank reported revenue growth of 15% to C$3.4 billion and net income growth of 3.1% to C$1.1 billion, which was weighed down by higher provisions for credit losses ("PCL") of C$203 million, up 36% year over year. Earnings per share ("EPS") fell 11% to C$2.58. Adjusted net income came in C$1.1 billion, up 15% year over year ("YOY"), while adjusted EPS was flat at C$2.68. For the quarter, National Bank's return on equity ("ROE") was 13.6%, down from 18.4% a year ago. The bank's Common Equity Tier 1 ratio was 13.9%, up from 13.7% a year ago. The PCL on impaired loans is something to watch for. It was 0.21% for the quarter – flat from a year ago.

The fiscal year-to-date results provide a bigger picture. For the period, National Bank reported net income growth of 3.4% to C$3.0 billion. However, EPS declined 6.6% to C$7.50. Adjusting primarily for the acquisition of the Canadian Western Bank ("CWB") acquisition, adjusted net income rose 19% to C$3.3 billion and adjusted EPS climbed 8.2% to C$8.46. The bank's PCL as a percentage of average loans and acceptances was 0.49%, up from 0.23% the period a year ago, while the PCL on impaired loans was 0.28% versus 0.19% a year ago. We update our 2025 EPS estimate to US$7.98.

Shares¹	337	338	340	335	334	336	342	337	338	341	391	402

From 2015 to 2024, National Bank compounded its EPS by 9.2% in CAD$. And in US$, National Bank compounded its EPS by 8.6%. These are above average when compared to its bigger peers. Stellar earnings growth would also lead to above-average dividend growth. In the period, its dividend growth rate was 8.7% in CAD$ but only 7.6% when translated into US$. Its medium-term objective is to grow adjusted EPS by 5-10% annually, and it targets a payout ratio of 40-50%.

With about 79% revenues coming from Canada and 49% of total revenues coming specifically from Quebec, the bank's growth rate is tied closely to the economic health of Canada and Quebec in particular. Quebec is the second most populous province in Canada and contributes about 20% of Canada's GDP. To be conservative, we use a 7.0% EPS growth rate and 7.0% dividend growth rate through 2030.

National Bank of Canada (NTIOF)

Updated September 4th, 2025 by Kay Ng

On February 3rd, 2025, National Bank completed the acquisition of Canadian Western Bank for C$6.8 billion, including C$5.3 billion for 100% of CWB common shares by way of a share exchange and C$1.4 billion to settle pre-existing relations. The transaction expanded National Bank's commercial footprint in the provinces of British Columbia, Alberta, and Ontario. CWB has had a history of low write-offs, for example, a 5-year average write-off of 0.14% of average loans.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	Now	2030
Avg. P/E	10.2	12.7	11.6	10.2	11.3	10.1	11.7	10.4	10.1	11.4	13.1	11.0
Avg. Yld.	4.2%	3.9%	3.6%	4.0%	3.7%	4.5%	3.3%	3.7%	4.1%	3.9%	3.3%	3.9%

National Bank traded at an average price-to-earnings ratio of 11.0 from 2015-2024. The Canadian banking sector has seen strength this year, leading to National Bank's current P/E that's relatively high to its norms. We think a P/E of 11.0 is a fair target for the long term. Using our 2025 EPS estimate, the bank appears to be pricey. We think its yield would be typically around 4%.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

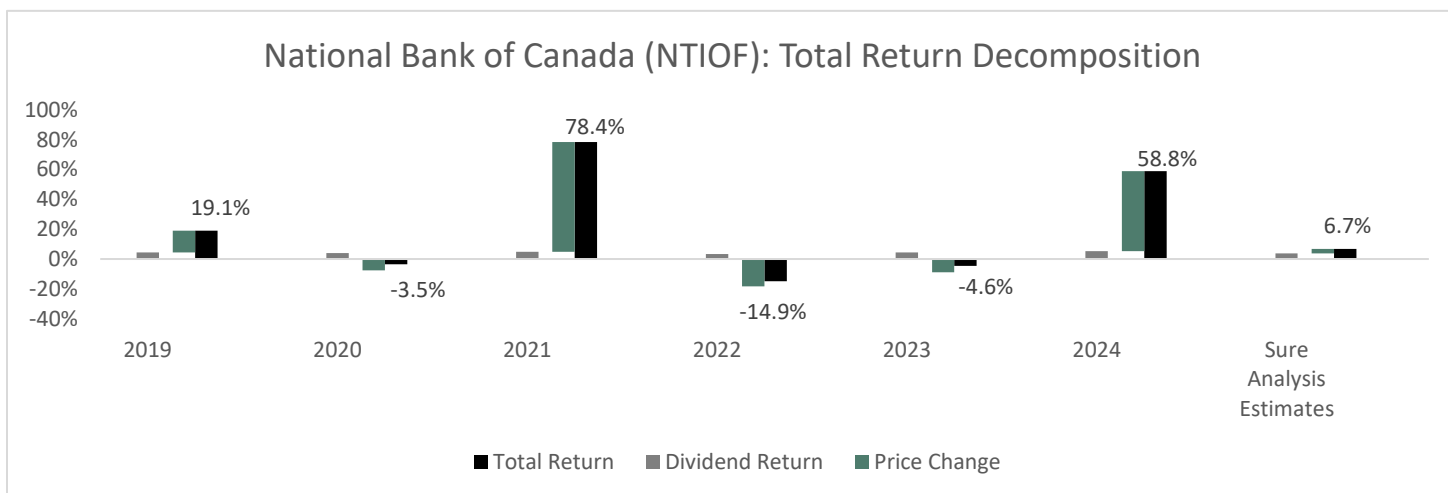

Year	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2030
Payout	43%	50%	42%	41%	42%	45%	32%	39%	42%	43%	43%	43%

National Bank has a dominant position in Quebec. It also benefits from the effective regulation of the Canadian banking system. The World Economic Forum has ranked Canada's banks as among the soundest in the world for the past decade or so, which highlights the fact that Canadian banks — National Bank included — are well capitalized and well managed. Like all financial institutions, the bank's balance sheet primarily consists of debt, largely in the form of deposits. Compared to the Big Five Canadian banks, National Bank's payout ratio tends to be a tad more conservative. It should keep paying healthy dividends. We believe a dividend growth rate of about 7.0% through 2030 is possible. The bank has navigated through challenging environments such as COVID-19 and the Great Recession before, and it has the ability to navigate future recessions as well.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

We forecast National Bank producing 6.7% annualized total returns over the next five years, consisting of a yield of 3.3%, 7.0% earnings-per-share growth, and a 3.4% headwind from valuation compression. We rate the stock as a hold currently.
