Overview & Current Events

Infosys Ltd. Is a global information technology corporation that provides services to its customers through a number of subsidiaries, including Progeon, Infosys Technologies, Infosys Consulting, and others. The company's business solutions include consulting, software development, engineering, systems integration, and it also offers banking software services. The company is headquartered in Bangalore, India. United States investors can initiate an ownership stake in Infosys through American Depository Receipts that trade on the New York Stock Exchange under the ticker INFY.

Infosys reported its second quarter (fiscal 2026) earnings results on October 16. The company announced that it generated revenues of $5.08 billion during the quarter, which was 4% higher compared to the revenues that Infosys generated during the previous year's quarter. Infosys' revenues were higher than what the analyst community forecasted, but the growth rate was lower compared to the previous quarter, when Infosys had reported a revenue increase of 5%. Gross profits expanded by a solid 4% versus one year earlier.

Infosys generated earnings-per-share of $0.20 during the second quarter, which was in line with the consensus estimate. Management updated its guidance for the current year, fiscal 2026. The company is forecasting revenue growth of 2%-3% at constant currency rates this year. Infosys' minor revenue increase that is expected for the current year will result in slightly higher earnings-per-share, according to the current consensus estimate.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

Year	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2026	2031

Infosys has managed to generate a solid rate of growth over the last decade. The company has compounded its adjusted earnings-per-share at 6% per year since 2016. Its profits rose relatively consistently, with year-over-year increases in most years. Infosys also remained profitable during the Great Recession and the COVID pandemic, which indicates that Infosys' recession resilience is strong.

Infosys' profit growth was primarily based on rising revenues in the past, and this will likely remain the case going forward. Due to growing demand for the services Infosys offers to its customers, and due to incentives for outsourcing for Infosys' customers, it is very likely that Infosys will be able to grow its top line during the coming years, too. Infosys has been buying back its shares at a reasonable pace over the last decade, and we believe that buybacks will be a growth driver of the company's earnings-per-share in the future, too. Due to the combination of some business growth and rising margins, combined with the positive impact of share repurchases, earnings-per-share should rise meaningfully in the long run. We assume that Infosys will be able to generate earnings-per-share of $0.80 during fiscal 2026, and that its growth during the coming years will be roughly in line with its historic growth rate.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	Now	2031
Avg. P/E	17.5	18.8	17.3	14.3	21.0	18.7	31.1	35.4	23.9	23.9	21.3	20.0
Avg. Yld.	1.9%	2.1%	2.3%	2.7%	2.2%	2.5%	1.5%	1.6%	2.5%	2.8%	3.1%	3.4%

Infosys trades at around 21-22 times this year's expected earnings right now. This is more than our fair value earnings multiple of 20, which would seem more appropriate, considering Infosys' growth rate. We believe that shares are slightly overvalued and that multiple compression will be a bit of a headwind going forward.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2026	2031
Payout	40%	40%	40%	45%	47%	48%	57%	61%	57%	67%	65%	68%

Infosys has raised its dividend payout ratio relatively consistently over the last decade. This is not surprising, as the dividend growth rate was substantially higher than the earnings-per-share growth rate over those ten years. Infosys' dividend payout ratio of around 70% is not dangerously high, but far from low. The dividend cut risk is not negligible.

Infosys competes with a range of peers, but due to the fact that the overall market for the services that Infosys offers continues to grow, competition is not a major problem. Infosys and its peers can all grow profitably without acting overly aggressively towards each other. Infosys remained profitable during the last financial crisis, and it is quite likely that Infosys will remain profitable during future recessions as well. Infosys thus does not look like a fundamentally risky stock, as both competitive threats as well as vulnerability to recessions are relatively negligible.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Infosys has experienced sizeable growth in the past, primarily thanks to ongoing increases in the company's top line. Thanks to a solid outlook for the whole industry, it is likely that Infosys will also be able to grow its revenues and profits meaningfully going forward. Infosys' dividend yield is higher than that of the broad market, but with Infosys trading ahead of fair value, we only rate the stock a hold for now.
