Overview & Current Events

Roper Technologies (ROP) is a specialized industrial company that manufactures products such as medical and scientific imaging equipment, pumps, and material analysis equipment. Roper Technologies also develops software solutions for the healthcare, transportation, food, energy, and water industries. The company was founded in 1981, generates around $7.0 billion in annual revenues, and is based in Sarasota, Florida.

On October 23rd, 2025, Roper posted its Q3 results for the period ending September 30th, 2025. Quarterly revenues and adjusted EPS were $2.02 billion and $5.14, up 14% and 11% year-over-year, respectively. Organic growth was 6%, with acquisitions contributing 8%, reflecting continued strength across Roper's diversified software and technology portfolio.

During the quarter, the company deployed $1.3 billion toward strategic acquisitions, including Subsplash and several bolt-on deals, while continuing to advance AI-driven innovation across its businesses. Management modestly adjusted its full-year 2025 adjusted EPS guidance to a range of $19.90 to $19.95 (from $19.90 to $20.05 previously) to reflect minor dilution from recent acquisitions. We have utilized the midpoint of this range in our estimate.

Roper has proven consistent growth in its profitability over the years. Over the past ten years, the company has grown its adjusted EPS by an annualized rate of 11.9%. Roper Technologies is poised for sustained growth, powered by high-margin software acquisitions like Vertafore (insurance solutions) and Strata Decision Technology (healthcare analytics).

Roper's shift toward these asset-light, recurring revenue platforms has sharpened its portfolio and freed up capital for further M&A. Recent divestitures—like the sale of TransCore—also show Roper's focus on concentrating on premium software and analytics segments, which should support resilient organic growth, margin expansion, and solid free cash flow over the medium term.

We retain our medium-term EPS growth expectations to 10%. While this year's projected growth of 9.0% points to a deceleration, keep in mind that management has consistently over-delivered on its own estimates in the past.

Roper also has a tremendous dividend growth record, numbering 32 years of consecutive dividend increases, which earns the company the Dividend Aristocrat title. The company's latest dividend raise upheld its previous rate of growth (10.0% compared to the previous hike of 9.9%). Over the past decade, DPS has grown annually by an average of 12.7%. We retain our DPS growth projection to 10%, which aligns with Roper's latest increase and is easily supported by the underlying net income.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	Now	2030
Avg. P/E	25.6	18.8	29.7	22.6	24.2	33.8	31.7	30.1	27	29.1	24.1	26.0

Roper's strong earnings and growth have impressed investors in recent years, with shares retaining a premium valuation despite most equities facing compressed multiples due to higher interest rates. We believe Roper does deserve to trade at a somewhat premium valuation, so see the stock as undervalued at the moment. We believe that a P/E of 26 reflects the company's resilient growth and quality financials. It's noteworthy that the stock's Dividend Aristocrat status has also been historically a contributing factor towards a premium valuation. We expect the stock's yield to remain low due to Roper's low dividend payouts.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2030
Payout	16%	19%	15%	14%	15%	18%	16%	18%	17%	17%	17%	17%

Roper's dividend payout ratio has been incredibly low during the last decade, even in the midst of the previous financial crisis. It should be considered exceptionally safe. During the last financial crisis, Roper remained highly profitable, although its earnings did decline by about 15%. During the pandemic earnings increased, which reassured investors of Roper's ability to generate robust results even in harsh environments. Roper is well-positioned in the niche markets it serves. Thus there are few competitive risks. It is highly likely that Roper will continue to make acquisitions similar to Vertafore, which further strengthened the company's portfolio and reduced competitive risks at the same time. Roper's inorganic growth will also improve its scale advantages over its peers, leading to improving economies of scale, as it's already visible through its decade-long gross margins expansion. Overall, Roper makes for a high-quality company.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Roper continues to deliver solid earnings growth. We see annualized returns of around 12.3% through 2030, powered by Roper's EPS growth and dividend, offset by the possibility of modest valuation tailwinds. Thus, we upgrade our rating to a buy. Income investors are likely to find more attractive opportunities elsewhere due to the stock's miniature yield. We do, however, believe that Roper is a high-quality company.
