Overview & Current Events

Barings BDC is a business development company (BDC) focused on providing senior secured loans to middle-market companies, primarily in the U.S. and internationally. Managed by Barings LLC, a global asset manager, the company invests in businesses with earnings before interest, taxes, depreciation, and amortization (EBITDA) ranging from $10 million to $75 million. These companies are typically well-established, generating steady cash flows, and operating in industries with lower cyclicality. Barings BDC seeks to enhance returns via prudent use of leverage, while maintaining a focus on capital preservation. Recent acquisitions of MVC Capital and Sierra Income Corporation have diversified its portfolio and strengthened its market presence.

As of the latest quarter, the company's investment portfolio had a fair value of $2.54 billion, down slightly from the prior period. While issuer count and composition metrics were not updated this quarter, the portfolio remained primarily invested in senior secured debt in line with the company's strategy. The weighted average yield on performing debt investments held steady at 9.8%, reflecting stable credit performance and a consistent return profile.

On November 6th, 2025, Barings BDC posted its Q3 results for the period ending September 30th, 2025. Net investment income (NII) was $33.6 million, or $0.32 per share, up from $29.8 million or $0.28 per share last quarter, supported by higher total investment income and continued credit discipline, while the weighted average yield on performing debt investments held steady at 9.8%. During the quarter, the company invested $78.6 million across 14 new portfolio companies and an additional $70.2 million in existing positions. For FY2025, we expect NII/share of $1.10

Barings BDC's net investment income (NII) per share from 2015 to 2024 reflects the underlying market conditions of this period and a significant shift in its investment approach. In 2015, NII was strong at $2.16, driven by Triangle Capital's (the company's prior name) focus on lower middle-market investments. The BDC reported all-time-high levels of capital deployment and steady portfolio growth, despite some challenges like yield compression and an increase in non-accruals. In 2016 and 2017, NII declined to $1.62 and $1.55, respectively, as the BDC faced further yield compression and a rise in portfolio non-accruals. This was due to increasing competition in the middle-market lending space, which put pressure on investment returns. Also, the company's focus on rotating its portfolio to improve asset quality caused a temporary reduction in income.

For 2018, NII data is meaningless, as the BDC underwent a major transition, selling its legacy portfolio and externalizing its management to Barings LLC. This period was marked by the sale of Triangle Capital's entire portfolio for nearly $1 billion to Benefit Street Partners, and the BDC began rebuilding its portfolio from scratch under Barings' management.

Barings BDC (BBDC)

Updated November 27th, 2025 by Nikolaos Sismanis

In 2019, NII fell to $0.61 as Barings BDC shifted to first-lien senior secured loans, prioritizing risk reduction and capital preservation, but with lower short-term yields. By 2020, NII improved to $0.64 due to increased loan originations and portfolio growth, despite the pandemic's impact. In 2021, NII increased to $0.90 as economic conditions and lending opportunities recovered. NII continued to grow in 2022 and 2023, reaching $1.12 and $1.19, driven by rising interest rates, strong loan originations, and solid credit performance. It then stabilized in 2024, as investment yields declined.

Moving forward, we expect that the BDC will grow its NII/share at a CAGR of 1%. The rather muted rate is to account for the fact that Barings is coming off a rather favorable environment, and thus its results could begin normalizing. Barings has also hiked its dividend for five successive years. We expect payouts to grow at a CAGR of 1% through 2030 as well.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	Now	2030
Avg. P/E	10.3	11.8	10.9	---	16.5	13.8	10.9	9.1	7.3	9.0	8.2	8.5
Avg. Yld.	10.6%	9.9%	9.8%	3.8%	5.4%	7.3%	8.4%	9.4%	11.8%	11.1%	11.5%	11.1%

Barings BDC has typically traded at a P/NII ratio in the high-single digits to low teens, in line with industry norms. Today, it's trading at just 8.2 times our projected NII per share, which we view as slightly undervalued. We believe a P/NII of around 8.5 is suitable. The 11.5% yield is expected to contribute significantly to the BDC's total return prospects, assuming the company can sustain it.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

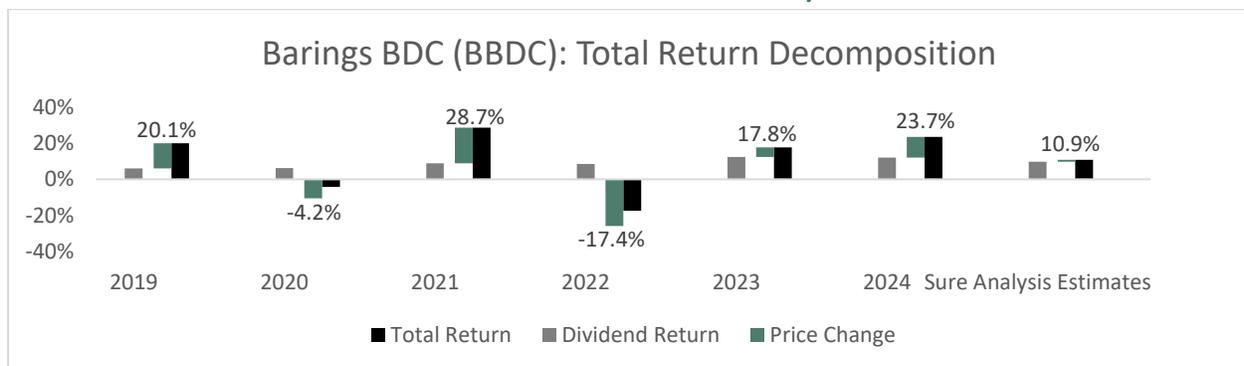

Year	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2030
Payout	109%	117%	106%	---	89%	102%	91%	85%	86%	100%	95%	95%

Barings BDC's competitive edge lies in its affiliation with Barings LLC, offering deep investment expertise and access to quality deals, particularly in senior secured loans. This focus on first-lien, floating-rate loans provides resilience during recessions and rising interest rate environments. Its portfolio is also positioned to withstand economic downturns by investing in less cyclical industries. Dividend safety has improved significantly since 2019, with payout ratios dropping below 100%, reaching a more secure 85-86% in 2022 and 2023, compared to unsustainable levels above 100% in earlier years. Still, it climbed back to 100% in 2024, so caution is warranted.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Barings BDC has a volatile history of NII and dividends, though its performance has stabilized lately. Today, its focus on senior secured middle-market loans and disciplined investment strategy makes it an interesting pick for income-oriented investors seeking high income. We forecast annualized returns of 10.9% through 2030, driven by our growth estimates, the 11.5% yield, and a potential valuation tailwind. We rate the stock as a hold, but don't blindly trust the dividend.
