D. R. Horton's earnings have grown consistently from 2011, once the company recovered from the financial crisis, through 2024. Even with lackluster results in 2025, the corporation has grown its EPS by 19.3% and 12.5% CAGR over the last nine and five years, respectively.

Although higher interest rates first affected housing demand, limited availability of homes and population growth kept demand strong. However, interest rates are now on a downtrend and are expected to further decline in the near future, which is likely to improve affordability and thus raise the demand for housing. Furthermore, if interest rates continue to decline, home values would likely improve as well.

From $11.41 per share for fiscal 2026, we are forecasting EPS growth at 18.0% per year over the next five years. Earnings could come in stronger if the housing boom continues. The company has a large backlog of homes under contract, most recently reported at 10,785 homes, valued at $4.1 billion. The cancellation rate improved slightly in fourth quarter FY 2025, at 20% vs 21% prior.

The company’s share count has grown over the long term, however since 2018 the company has made efforts to reduce its share count, and we see this as another tailwind to earnings in the coming years.

The corporation’s dividend has grown by 24% on average over the past nine years, and we estimate it will grow at around 13% in the next five years.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2026	2031
Avg. P/E	12.9	11.8	11.0	9.7	8.6	7.7	5.5	7.3	11.1	10.1	13.1	10.0
Avg. Yld.	1.1%	1.2%	1.1%	1.4%	1.3%	0.9%	1.1%	0.9%	0.7%	1.1%	1.2%	1.3%

D.R. Horton’s price-to-earnings multiple appears to be overvalued at 13.1 based on 2026 forecast earnings, and we peg fair value at 10.0 times earnings, in line with its ten-year average. As a result, we see the potential for a valuation headwind. DHI yields 1.2% and we expect the yield to increase slightly from here due to its impressive dividend growth.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2026	2031
Payout	14%	15%	12%	14%	11%	7%	5%	7%	8%	14%	16%	13%

The payout ratio is low at only 16% of net income, and we estimate that the company has a long runway of dividend growth ahead of it. However, it must be noted that DHI faced many hardships in the Great Financial Crisis, which caused it to report losses from 2007 to 2009 and caused the dividend to be cut significantly. The company only eclipsed its 2005 per share earnings in 2020. This demonstrates that D.R. Horton is not recession resistant. Additionally, interest rates and housing demand can cause volatile earnings in a recession. DHI’s competitive advantage lies in its industry leading position in homebuilding, which it has dominated since 2002.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

D. R. Horton has been the US’ largest homebuilder by volume for more than 20 years, and has closed over 1.2 million homes in its 45-year+ history. Since the Great Financial Crisis, the corporation has compounded earnings and the dividend at strong double digits, and we see this continuing. D.R. Horton earns a hold rating with 13.0% annualized total returns forecasted through 2030.
