Overview & Current Events

L'Oréal is one of the world's largest cosmetics groups, with a portfolio of 37 global brands. The French company offers shampoos, hair-care and skincare products, shower gels, cleansers, styling and make-up items, perfumes and related goods. Its globally recognised brands include Garnier, Maybelline New York, Giorgio Armani Beauty, Kiehl's, Urban Decay, Biotherm and Ralph Lauren. L'Oréal generates over $45 billion in annual sales and is based in Paris, France. All figures in this report have been converted to USD unless otherwise noted.

On February 3rd, 2025, L'Oréal agreed to sell 29.6 million of its Sanofi shares to Sanofi for €101.5 each or €3 billion. After the transaction and share cancellation, L'Oréal will hold 7.2% of Sanofi's share capital and 13.1% of its voting rights.

On February 6th, 2025, L'Oréal increased its dividend by 6.1% (in constant currency) to €7.00 ($7.94). Also, the loyalty bonus (see below) increased the payout by 10%, bringing it to €7.70, with a correspondingly higher amount in USD.

On October 21st, 2025, L'Oréal released its results for the nine-month period ending September 30th, 2025. For the third quarter, sales reached $13.235 billion, reflecting +4.2% like-for-like growth and +0.5% reported growth, supported by continued acceleration across all divisions and geographies. This quarter marked a clear step-up in momentum, helped by strong contributions from both volume and mix as well as sustained double-digit growth in online channels.

Division-wise, Professional Products delivered robust +9.3% like-for-like growth, continuing to outperform thanks to strength in premium haircare and salon-focused innovations. Consumer Products grew +3.8% like-for-like, with balanced contributions across categories and strong reacceleration in North America. L'Oréal Luxe posted +2.5% like-for-like growth, driven by better market conditions in selective beauty and strong performance in fragrances. Dermatological Beauty remained a key contributor, growing +5.1% like-for-like.

The company did not report bottom-line metrics (it only does so in its H1 and full-year report). We maintain our FY2025 estimate to $14.91.

L'Oréal's EPS and DPS, as shown in the table, have both been affected by FX over the past decade when expressed in U.S. dollars. The company's EPS and DPS have grown by around 14.0% and 10.3% over the last five years, respectively. Earnings should keep growing at a strong pace, powered by organic growth, price increases, and the gross profit margin expansion due to L'Oréal's economies of scale. The company is a consumer staples behemoth not only in Europe, but also globally, enjoying massive scale capabilities that can dominate global demand trends. We are forecasting a 10% intermediate growth rate, assuming no impacts from FX. Dividends are paid once annually. L'Oréal boasts one of the longest dividend growth records amongst European firms, with its latest dividend increase of 6.1% marking 25 years of annual increases (in Euros). The company offers a unique perk to its long-term shareholders. Those holding shares for at least two calendar years receive a 10% "loyalty bonus" on the original dividend. We are forecasting DPS growth of around 8.5% through 2030.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	Now	2030
Avg. P/E	27.4	29.9	27.3	30.9	37.4	41.1	41.5	28.8	32.1	35.5	27.0	26.0
Avg. Yld.	1.9%	2.0%	2.0%	1.8%	1.5%	1.5%	1.3%	1.9%	1.7%	1.7%	2.0%	1.9%

L'Oréal has traded at elevated multiples over the past decade, reflecting investors' willingness to pay a premium for its qualities, market dominance, and growth. The company's "loyalty bonus" discourages share sales, further contributing to sustained valuation premiums. The valuation has normalized recently. Still, we believe the stock is slightly overvalued at its current levels. We are still utilizing a more reasonable P/E of 26 in our estimates, which we believe is a fair multiple for the French giant.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2030
Payout	53%	60%	56%	56%	58%	63%	58%	57%	57%	59%	53%	50%

L'Oréal's dividend should be considered very safe. The company benefits from consistent profitability, which allowed it to keep raising its payout even during the Great Financial Crisis. The payout ratio currently stands at a healthy level of 53%. L'Oréal's competitive advantage lies in its sheer size, which has resulted in the company accumulating a significant market share. Its companies have massive brand values, generating consistent sales globally. Hence investors should expect a relatively stable performance even under a harsh recession, as was the case during 2007-2008. The company proved totally insulated during the COVID-19 pandemic as well. Finally, L'Oréal has a pristine balance sheet, with its long-term debt/equity ratio standing at ~20%.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

L'Oréal is one of the most respected European stocks, featuring an incredibly consistent record of shareholder returns. The company's capital returns have been growing for years without interruption, while its "loyalty bonus" program has been a phenomenal strategy to reduce share price fluctuations over time. Total return potential comes in at 10.9% per annum, driven by 10% growth in earnings and the 2.0% dividend yield, offset by a potential -0.8% annual valuation headwind. It's worth noting that France applies a notably dividend withholding tax of 30% under typical circumstances, which could hamper our expected returns. L'Oréal earns a hold rating.
