Overview & Current Events

Radian Group is a mortgage and real estate company that provides mortgage insurance and other products and services. It was founded in 1977 and it is headquartered in Wayne, Pennsylvania. The company was initially known as CMAC Investment Corporation and changed its name to Radian Group in 1999. The primary segment of Radian Group is its mortgage insurance segment, which includes credit-related insurance coverage for the benefit of mortgage-lending institutions and mortgage credit investors. The stock has a market capitalization of $4.8 billion.

On September 18th, 2025, Radian Group agreed to acquire Inigo for $1.7 billion in cash. The deal value is 1.5 times the projected tangible book value of Inigo at the end of 2025 and is expected to boost earnings-per-share by 14%-16%. The deal, which is expected to close in the first quarter of 2026, will be funded with the available funds of Radian Group.

In early November, Radian Group reported (11/4/25) results for the third quarter of fiscal 2025. Operating earnings-per-share grew 2% over the prior year's quarter, from $1.09 to $1.11, thanks to 8% growth in new insurance written. Earnings-per-share exceeded the analysts' estimates by $0.06. Radian Group has beaten the analysts' estimates for 16 consecutive quarters. Book value per share grew 9%. Management stated that it expects the pending acquisition of Inigo to expand the total addressable market by 12 times and double the earned premiums of the company. It will also transform the company to a global, multi-line specialty insurer. Radian Group does not provide guidance for earnings-per-share.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

The performance of Radian Group is sensitive to the strength of the housing market. The company has grown its earnings-per-share by 14.4% per year on average over the last decade but it has decelerated in recent years. It has grown its bottom line by 5.1% per year on average over the last five years. We also note that the insurer has not managed to match the record earnings-per-share it posted in 2022. Moreover, its performance record has been volatile. The volatile results combined with the deceleration in recent years indicate the presence of significant competitive forces in this business. Nevertheless, thanks to the upcoming takeover of Inigo, we now assume 5.0% (instead of 4.0%) average annual growth of earnings-per-share over the next five years. The company may grow even faster thanks to the acquisition of Inigo but we prefer to have a margin of safety, given the volatile performance record.

Notably, share repurchases have constituted a meaningful and consistent growth driver throughout the last decade. Radian Group has reduced its share count by 5% per year on average over the last decade. Thanks to its ample free cash flows and its low payout ratio, the company is likely to continue repurchasing shares at a fast pace for years. Given the low price-to-earnings ratio of the stock, we believe that share repurchases significantly enhance shareholder value.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	Now	2030
Avg. P/E	13.7	9.3	33.5	6.8	7.1	8.8	7.1	4.9	6.3	7.9	9.1	8.0
Avg. Yld.	0.0%	0.1%	0.1%	0.1%	0.0%	2.9%	2.5%	3.8%	3.7%	3.0%	2.9%	3.2%

Excluding 2017, in which a temporary plunge in earnings resulted in an abnormally high price-to-earnings ratio, shares of Radian Group have traded hands with an average price-to-earnings ratio of 8.0. We consider this price-to-earnings ratio fair for this stock. The stock is currently trading at a price-to-earnings ratio of 9.1. If it trades at fair valuation level in five years, it will incur a -2.5% annualized drag in its returns.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2030
Payout	1%	1%	2%	0%	0%	25%	17%	18%	23%	24%	26%	25%

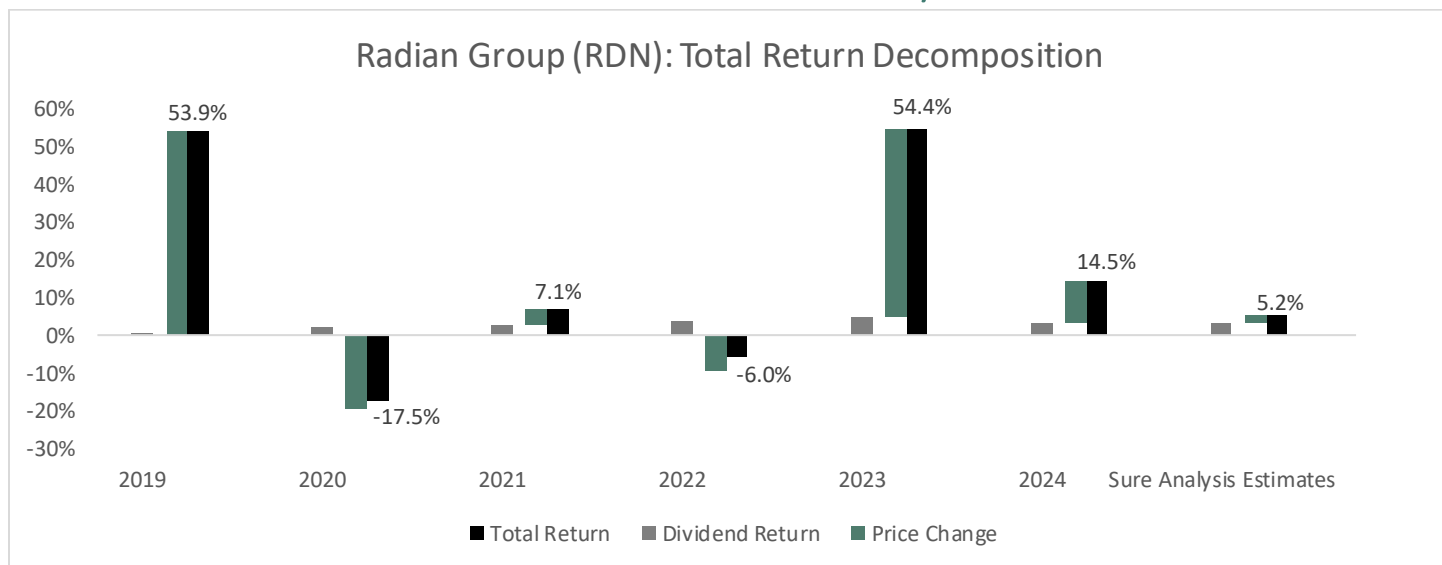

Radian Group faces competition from many companies within the private mortgage insurance industry, such as Essent Guaranty, MGIC Investment Corporation and NMI Holdings. Insurance products are commodity-like in nature and hence it is hard for a company to establish a wide business moat. The intense competition is reflected in the somewhat volatile performance record of Radian Group. In addition, the company incurred a -37.5% decrease in earnings-per-share in 2020. Therefore, it is not resilient to recessions or downturns of the housing market.

On the bright side, the company has consistently proved its shareholder-friendly character. It is currently offering a 2.9% dividend with a wide margin of safety, given the healthy payout ratio of 26%. While the dividend yield is not exciting, the company also repurchases its shares at a fast pace (5% per year on average over the last decade). Radian Group was among the few companies that kept repurchasing shares during the pandemic in 2020. We applaud management for repurchasing shares at low price-to-earnings ratios, thus enhancing shareholder value.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Radian Group has stagnated in the last two years, primarily due to high mortgage rates and a low supply of affordable homes. If inflation cools and interest rates decrease, the company is likely to experience improved business momentum. The stock could offer a 5.2% annual total return over the next five years thanks to 5.0% growth of earnings-per-share and a 2.9% dividend, partly offset by a -2.5% potential valuation drag. The stock maintains its hold rating.
