Overview & Current Events

PennantPark Investment Corporation (NYSE: PNNT) is a business development company focused on providing private credit to U.S. core middle-market companies, typically with $10–$50 million of EBITDA, through primarily first-lien, senior secured loans. As of December 31st, 2025, PNNT had a $1.22 billion investment portfolio across 158 companies, with a weighted average yield on interest-bearing debt investments of 10.9%. The portfolio consisted of 40% first-lien secured debt, 2% second-lien secured debt, 17% subordinated debt, 24% preferred and common equity, and 17% U.S. Government Securities. The interest-bearing debt portfolio was 89% variable rate, and four portfolio companies were on non-accrual, representing 1.1% of the portfolio at fair value. PNNT pays dividends on a monthly basis.

On February 9th, 2026, PennantPark Investment reported its fiscal Q1 results for the quarter ended December 31st, 2025. For the quarter, total investment income declined year over year to $27.3 million from $34.2 million, driven by a smaller portfolio and lower yields. Net investment income fell to $7.0 million, or $0.11 per share, from $13.0 million, or $0.20 per share, a 45% decline in per-share earnings.

PennantPark reported net investment gains of $9.0 million, or $0.14 per share, down from $16.1 million, or $0.25 per share, a year ago, as realized gains were more than offset by unrealized depreciation. Net asset value fell 1.5% quarter over quarter to $7.00 per share from $7.11, reflecting depreciation and distributions.

PennantPark also announced that beginning with the April 2026 payment, its $0.08 monthly dividend will be split into a $0.04 base dividend and a $0.04 supplemental dividend, with the supplemental expected to be paid through December 2026 and supported by spillover income. The new structure raises questions because the supplemental portion can be removed in the future, effectively reducing the total dividend without changing the base payout.

For FY2026, we forecast NII/share of $0.96 under “normal conditions”.

PennantPark Investment has historically posted relatively strong results. While NII/share dipped during the pandemic, it has since recovered to pre-pandemic levels. More specifically, from 2016 through 2018, PennantPark’s NII per share declined from $0.99 to $0.75 mainly because the company reduced and repositioned its portfolio into lower-yielding assets, which lowered investment income despite falling expenses. The decline was driven by a smaller portfolio at cost and lower yields, only partially offset by reduced debt costs and management fees.

From 2019 through 2021, NII per share fell further from $0.66 to $0.54, driven primarily by the collapse in base interest rates during COVID. Because more than 90% of the portfolio was floating-rate, the sharp drop in LIBOR directly reduced investment income, and the benefit from lower funding costs did not fully offset the revenue decline. Management explicitly attributes this period’s pressure on NII to the rate environment.

Updated February 17th, 2026, by Nikolaos Sismanis

From 2022 through 2025, NII rebounded significantly, peaking at $1.00 in 2023 before falling back to $0.71 in 2025. The rebound was driven by higher base rates flowing through the floating-rate portfolio, while the subsequent decline was caused by a smaller portfolio, lower average yields, and lower dividend income, which reduced investment income in 2025 versus 2024, only partially offset by lower expenses.

Moving forward, we now expect NII per share and the dividend to decline by roughly 2% annually, reflecting the smaller portfolio size following elevated repayments, a lower weighted average yield on debt investments, and pressure from unrealized depreciation. The introduction of a supplemental dividend component further suggests less durable earnings coverage and increases the risk of a future reduction in the total payout.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	Now	2031
Avg. P/NII	7.7	9.9	8.9	9.7	7.8	12.4	9.7	6.0	7.6	9.9	5.3	6.5
Avg. Yld.	14.7%	10.5%	10.7%	11.3%	13.3%	7.2%	8.8%	12.7%	12.6%	13.7%	18.9%	15.4%

Historically, PNNT has traded in a mid-to-high single-digit P/NII range, typically around ~8–10x. The multiple compressed during periods of stress (7.8x in 2020 and 6.0x in 2023) and expanded during periods of greater earnings confidence (peaking at 12.4x in 2021). Today, the stock is trading at one of the lowest multiples in its history, with investors pricing in the possibility of a dividend cut after last year’s compressed NII.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2026	2031
Payout	113%	104%	96%	109%	103%	89%	85%	76%	96%	135%	100%	100%

PennantPark runs a fairly conservative lending book and generally lends to smaller, profitable companies with good collateral and reasonable leverage, which helps on the credit side and makes the portfolio more resilient than many higher-risk lenders. That said, the dividend is not especially safe. It is currently only barely covered by NII, and the company has cut the dividend before, so there is clear precedent that the payout will be reduced if conditions get worse. The business also does not have a true moat, as private credit is very competitive, and returns depend a lot on interest rates, access to capital, and credit conditions. In a recession, the loans themselves may hold up better than average, but earnings and the dividend can still come under pressure, making this more of a high-income, cyclical investment than a truly defensive one.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Overall, PNNT offers a very attractive high yield and has increased the dividend in recent years, but the payout is only thinly covered and has been cut before, making the income compelling yet clearly exposed to credit, economic, and interest-rate risk. We forecast annualized returns of 14.8% through 2031, to be powered primarily by the starting dividend yield and valuation tailwinds, offset by negative growth. Shares earn a very speculative hold rating.
