Overview & Current Events

Avnet Inc. (AVT) is a global distributor of electronic components and technology solutions, connecting semiconductors and other components suppliers to customers in 140 countries. Avnet is the third largest semiconductor distributor in the world and the largest for European chip distribution. The company has two main operating segments: the Electronic Components segment, which sells electrical components, semiconductors, interconnect, passive and electromechanical components, and the Farnell segment, which sells kits, tools, test measurement, and electronic components. The Electronic Components segment is the primary segment of the company, constituting of more than 90% of sales, while the Farnell segment contributes the remainder. The company operates across the Americas, Europe, the Middle East, Africa (EMEA), and Asia/Pacific regions.

On January 28th, 2025, Avnet announced Q2 2026 results, reporting non-GAAP adjusted diluted EPS of $1.05, which beat estimates by $0.10. The company reported revenue of $6.3 billion in revenue, representing 11.6% year-over-year growth and a 7.1% increase from the prior quarter.

Avnet reported strong fiscal second-quarter results, driven by broad-based demand across its global markets. Performance was led by Asia, where revenue reached a record $3.2 billion, marking the sixth consecutive quarter of annual growth. Sales also improved across the Americas and EMEA, while Farnell recorded its third straight quarter of year-over-year expansion. Management noted that both total company revenue and profitability exceeded expectations, reflecting improving demand trends and continued operational execution across the business.

Operational performance also benefited from disciplined cost management and inventory optimization. Operating income totaled $146 million, while adjusted operating income reached $171.7 million, reflecting sequential improvement and operating leverage as earnings growth outpaced revenue growth during the quarter. The company also demonstrated strong cash generation, producing $208 million in operating cash flow. Operational initiatives helped reduce inventories by $126 million, bringing days of inventory down to 86 days, with the Electronic Components business falling below 80 days. Looking ahead, management expects continued momentum, with fiscal third-quarter guidance pointing to above-normal seasonal sales growth and improving margins supported by steady demand and operational efficiency initiatives.

Avnet has suffered some recent setbacks that have hurt its profitability and EPS growth. Starting in 2016, the company suffered from a failed implementation of a new ERP system in North America that has prolonged impacted the firm's profitability and efficiency. Management's mistakes and poor execution are reflected in the financials as the EPS dropped from $4.49 in 2015 to $2.02 in 2020. However, the company experienced significant EPS and profitability growth in 2022.

Updated March 15th, 2026, by Yiannis Zourmpanos

We expect the company to continue its growth, but at a moderate pace, since, despite the operational challenges, the company has a robust business model and should continue to do well in the coming years. The company has consistently reported double-digit revenue growth and has surpassed market expectations on EPS. Therefore, we used the midpoint of analysts' EPS estimates of $4.65 for 2026 and expect an annual EPS growth rate of 5.0% over the next five years, leading to our estimated EPS of $5.93 by the end of the fiscal year 2031. Finally, we expect the company to maintain a healthy dividend distribution and forecast a dividend payment of $1.79 in 2031.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	Now	2031
Avg. P/E	10.0	12.6	11.8	10.5	14.3	14.7	6.2	5.6	10.1	18.4	12.9	8.0
Avg. Yld.	0.4%	0.4%	0.5%	0.5%	0.7%	0.7%	0.6%	2.5%	2.3%	2.5%	2.3%	3.8%

Avnet currently trades at a forward P/E of 12.9, higher than both the 10-year average P/E of 11.4 and the five-year average P/E of 11.0. Even though the company operates in the cyclical sector and earnings growth has not been consistent, we believe it will continue to benefit from the robust demand for its products in the communication and defense market. That said, we believe a P/E ratio of 8.0 would be a fair reflection of the business, in our view, which results in a five-year price target of $47.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

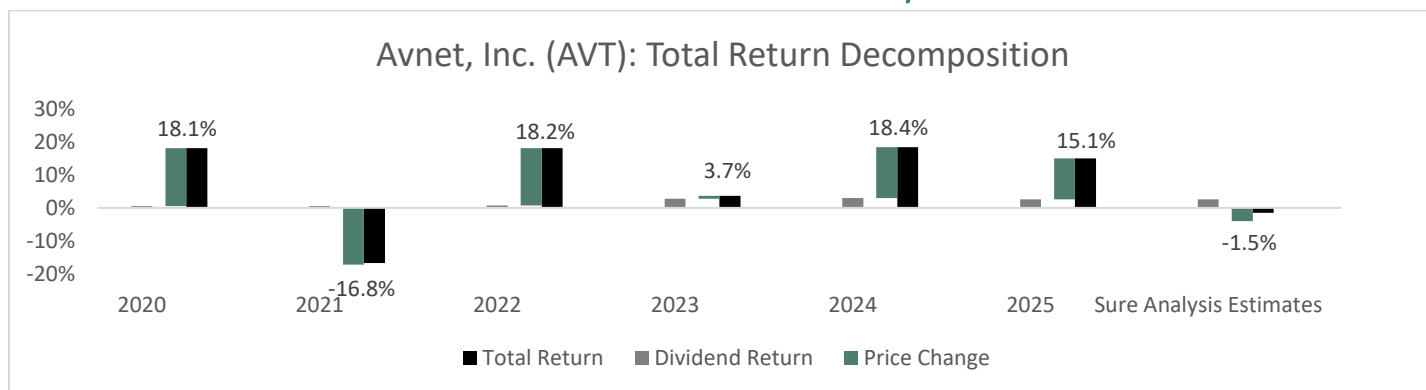

Year	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2026	2031
Payout	4%	6%	5%	5%	10%	8%	4%	14%	23%	45%	30%	30%

Avnet holds a competitive advantage as a global distributor of electronic components and solutions, benefiting from a vast network and industry expertise. Its recession performance has historically demonstrated resilience due to its diversified customer base spanning various sectors. However, its debt levels have fluctuated, impacting financial flexibility. Overall, AVT's competitive positioning and adaptable business model contribute to its stability during economic downturns, although debt management remains crucial for sustained growth. Avnet has paid increasing dividends over the past 13 years, with the payout ratio averaging 12%. The company has also been committed to increasing shareholder value by delivering a reliable dividend and continued share repurchases. During Q4, the company also returned capital to shareholders during the quarter, distributing $28 million in dividends as part of its ongoing capital return program.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Although Avnet has suffered from implementation failures that have impacted its efficiency and profitability, the company remains the third largest chip distributor globally. Moreover, it holds the top market share in Europe. However, we maintain our hold rating premised our total annual return projection of -1.5% for the medium-term, derived from the forecasted earnings-per-share growth of 5.0%, a dividend yield of 2.3%, and multiple compression.
