Overview & Current Events

Founded in 1866 and headquartered in Cleveland, OH, Sherwin-Williams is North America's largest manufacturer of paints and coatings. It distributes its products through wholesalers as well as retail stores (including a chain of more than 5,000 company-operated stores and facilities) to 120 countries under the Sherwin-Williams name. The company also manufactures Dutch Boy, Pratt & Lambert, Minwax, Thompson's Waterseal, Krylon, Valspar (acquired in 2017), and other brands. Sherwin-Williams generated annual sales of $24 billion last year and has a market capitalization of $89 billion. With 48 years of consecutive dividend increases, Sherwin-Williams is a member of the Dividend Aristocrats Index.

On January 29th, 2026, Sherwin-Williams released financial results for the fourth quarter of fiscal 2025. Sales grew 6% over the prior year's quarter while gross margin edged down from 48.6% to 48.5%. Adjusted earnings-per-share grew 7%, from $2.09 to $2.23, exceeding the analysts' estimates by $0.07.

Due to somewhat soft demand, which is likely to persist for a while, Sherwin-Williams provided modest guidance for earnings-per-share in 2026. It expects adjusted earnings-per-share of $11.50-$11.90. Accordingly, we expect earnings-per-share of $11.70 this year.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

Year	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2026	2031

Sherwin-Williams has put together an exceptionally strong growth record in the past, with earnings-per-share growing at a 12.4% average annual rate over the last decade. This has been driven by solid top line growth, significant margin improvement and a lower share count. The company posted especially impressive results in the 2018 – 2020 period, despite coming off a large base. However, it is important to point out that some of this has been driven by one-time items, such as a decline in the company's tax rate.

While Sherwin-Williams' historical growth rate is outstanding, we believe that the company is unlikely to replicate this performance moving forward. We believe that Sherwin-Williams can deliver 7% annualized earnings growth over a full economic cycle, roughly in line with its 5-year growth rate. Growth can come from several factors, including revenue expansion – resting on higher sales at the company's existing stores – margin improvement, share repurchases, and general economic growth. The company has reduced its share count by ~11% over the last decade, and we believe that the number of shares will continue to decline, albeit irregularly, over time.

Sherwin-Williams Company (SHW)

Updated March 2nd, 2026, by Aristofanis Papadatos

Sherwin-Williams has been a high-quality growth name during the last decade and throughout its history. As a result, it has generally commanded a premium valuation – trading hands around 26 times earnings on average during the last 10 years. Given a slower anticipated growth rate, we assume a fair P/E ratio of 23.0. The stock is now trading at a P/E ratio of 31.0. If it trades at our assumed fair valuation level in five years, it will incur a -5.8% annualized valuation drag.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2026	2031
Payout	28%	23%	19%	21%	22%	27%	27%	23%	25%	28%	27%	31%

Sherwin-Williams has raised its dividend consistently for decades, but its dividend payout ratio has never risen to a high level. While the dividend appears exceptionally well covered, the combination of a low payout ratio and above average valuation result in a lackluster dividend yield.

Sherwin-Williams is not necessarily in a high-growth industry, but its entrenched position offers the company its fair share of competitive advantages, allowing the business to grow consistently. Moreover, acquisitions are a way for Sherwin-Williams to enhance its presence, with the Valspar transaction being a good example.

During the Great Recession, Sherwin-Williams posted earnings-per-share of $4.70, $4.00, $3.78, and $4.21 over the 2007 through 2010 stretch (with a growing dividend). This is somewhat surprising for a company in the paints and coatings industry – generally thought to be a cyclical business – but illustrates the underlying strength of the company. The company proved resilient to the pandemic as well.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Sherwin-Williams is an exemplary company but it almost always trades with a premium valuation. The stock has underperformed the S&P 500 by a wide margin in the last 12 months (+2% vs. +17%) but it remains richly valued. We are forecasting 1.9% total return potential, as 7% growth of earnings-per-share and a 0.9% dividend may be partly offset by a -5.8% valuation drag. The stock maintains its hold rating.
