Overview & Current Events

CME Group (CME) is the world's leading derivatives exchange operator, providing price discovery and risk management for major asset classes, including interest rates, equity indices, foreign exchange, commodities, and cryptocurrencies. Founded in 1898, CME went public in 2002 and became the largest futures exchange by volume through strategic acquisitions, including NYMEX and COMEX. Trading on the CME Globex electronic platform, the company serves producers, consumers, financial institutions, and speculators globally, generating over $6.5 billion in annual revenue. CME's business model benefits from increased institutional derivatives participation and expanding global markets, while the company maintains disciplined capital allocation through its variable dividend policy.

On April 22nd, 2026, the company shared its financial results for the first quarter ended March 31st, 2026. CME's revenue surged 14.5% over the year-ago period to a record $1.88 billion in the quarter. This was driven by record-breaking average daily volumes across all major asset classes (interest rates, equities, foreign exchange, energy, ag commodities, and metals) during the quarter. That ranged from 24% growth in contracts in interest rates to as much as a 130% spike in average daily volumes for metals for the quarter. The global demand for risk management was most apparent outside of the United States, with non-U.S. volume growing at over double the rate of domestic volume in the quarter. CME's adjusted diluted EPS climbed 20% higher year-over-year to $3.36 during the quarter. This came up $0.02 short of the analyst consensus for the quarter.

Growth On A Per-Share Basis

Year	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2026	2031

DPS	$2.40	$2.64	$2.80	$3.00	$3.40	$3.60	$4.00	$4.40	$4.60	$5.00	$5.20	$7.47
Shares²	338.2	339.2	356.8	357.5	358.1	358.6	358.9	359.2	359.6	359.0	362.8	365.0

Looking ahead, we believe that CME can generate 7.5% annual adjusted diluted EPS growth through 2031, off an anticipated 2026 base of $12.21. The primary tailwind for the company is volatility in the public markets for the foreseeable future. This is because there is tremendous uncertainty on how various trade, geopolitical, global growth, and interest rate scenarios will play out to direct the near-term future of the American and global economies. What's more, we see the company's extensive network and large volume enabling it to drive growth through starting ancillary services and exchange products, as well as selling order flow data to third parties.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	Now	2031
Avg. P/E	25.5	30.6	27.4	30.1	27.1	34.3	21.1	22.6	22.6	24.1	23.2	24.0
Avg. Yld.	2.1%	1.8%	1.5%	1.5%	1.9%	1.6%	2.4%	2.1%	2.0%	1.9%	1.8%	1.8%

Since 2016, CME has traded at a P/E ratio as cheap as the low-20s to as much as the mid-30s. Over that time, the average P/E ratio was above 26. Moving forward, we think that a fair value P/E ratio of 24 is reasonable. That's because CME's adjusted diluted EPS growth profile remains largely intact. Relative to the current-year P/E ratio of 23.2, this signals that shares are modestly undervalued.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2026	2031
Payout	53%	55%	41%	44%	51%	54%	50%	47%	45%	45%	43%	43%

CME's most notable competitive advantage is its network effect as a consolidator in the financial exchange space. Thanks to its large volume, it offers customers considerable liquidity, which is an extremely attractive feature for this industry. The company's large volume also gives it economies of scale, enabling it to offer competitive pricing without meaningfully hurting profitability. This not only enables the company to retain customers but also attracts new ones. As its customer count grows, its network effect only grows stronger, which in turn drives further liquidity and cost advantages, resulting in a virtuous cycle. Given that more than half of all interest rate-related futures in the world and nearly all North American interest rate-related futures are traded on the company's exchanges, the company has established a dominant network effect in its core business.

CME is a financial fortress as well, with an AA- S&P credit rating on a stable outlook. The company's regular dividend is also very secure, with the payout ratio set to be in the low-40% range in 2026. That provides CME with the runway to extend its 16-year dividend growth streak in the years ahead.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

CME's 1.8% dividend yield, 7.5% annual adjusted diluted EPS growth prospects, and 0.6% annual valuation multiple upside potential could deliver 9.8% annual total returns through 2031. That's why we're upgrading shares to a Buy rating.
