Overview & Current Events

FedEx Corp. is a transportation and shipping company. It was founded in 1971. The company offers a variety of services including transportation, e-commerce, and business services. It operates four core segments: FedEx Express, FedEx Ground, FedEx Freight, and FedEx Services. FedEx provides domestic and international shipping for package delivery and freight. It also provides sales, marketing, information technology, communications, customer service, technical support, billing, and collection services.

On March 19th, 2026, FedEx released its fiscal Q3 results for the period ending February 28th, 2026. FedEx reported an 8.1% year-over-year revenue increase to $24.0 billion. FedEx Express delivered significantly higher operating income, fueled by robust U.S. domestic and international priority package yields, increased domestic volume, and the continued execution of the "DRIVE" transformation program. These gains were partially offset by higher variable incentive compensation, increased wage rates, and the ongoing operational costs related to the MD-11 aircraft fleet retirement. FedEx Freight reported weaker results as lower shipment volumes and costs associated with its upcoming spin-off offset improved pricing and yield discipline.

Adjusted EPS rose to $5.25 from $4.51 in the prior-year period (benefiting from a $0.41 per share foreign tax credit). For fiscal 2026, FedEx raised its outlook again, now forecasting 6.0%–6.5% revenue growth and adjusted EPS of $19.30 to $20.10 (up from $17.80 to $19.00), while maintaining its target of over $1 billion in permanent cost savings. We have raised our fiscal 2026 adjusted EPS estimate to $19.61. All other figures in our tables reflect GAAP results.

Separately, FedEx confirmed it has entered the final regulatory and operational phase of the tax-free spin-off of FedEx Freight into a standalone, publicly traded company on June 1st, 2026, with the new entity's shares set to debut on the NYSE under the ticker FDXF.

FedEx is likely to continue facing growth headwinds during the current market environment. The company's business model is cyclical, and thus lower shipment volumes combined with higher expenses can have a violent impact on its margins. Still, over the long run, the company should continue to dominate and expand its footprint in the logistics industry while achieving operational efficiencies due to its massive possible scalability. We have seen this multiple times over the years, with FedEx coming out of recessions quite stronger than before. In terms of the dividend, management has been prudent with hikes, always making sure that it retains a considerable margin of safety before a potential increase. This way, FedEx can still keep paying shareholders and avoid potential dividend cuts, which have not occurred since its first dividend was paid back in 2002. Following increased affordability by applying this strategy, the dividend has nearly doubled since 2019. While the current trading environment is unfavorable, we retain our EPS and DPS CAGR expectations at 6% due to a potential recovery in the coming years and FedEx's cost-reduction initiatives. Finally, FedEx has been executing a large amount of buybacks, having retired around 13% of its shares over the past decade.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	Now	2031
Avg. P/E	18.4	14.4	14.6	15.2	13.5	14.4	17.0	13.3	13.7	15.6	18.6	15.0
Avg. Yld.	0.5%	0.6%	0.9%	0.9%	1.2%	0.9%	0.9%	2.2%	2.1%	2.1%	1.6%	2.1%

Due to its sensitivity to economic cycles, FedEx has traditionally commanded reasonable valuation multiples in the mid-teens. FedEx is now trading at a P/E ratio of 18.6, above the ten-year average of 15.0. We have set our fair P/E estimate at 15, in line with its last-decade average, implying the possibility of a modest valuation headwind. The dividend yield of 1.6% exceeds its historical average due to bold dividend hikes over the past five years, but remains soft overall.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2026	2031
Payout	17%	15%	13%	126%	53%	14%	24%	30%	30%	33%	30%	31%

FedEx excels in safety and quality, maintaining consistent profitability and a robust balance sheet. With ample cash flow, it comfortably meets debt obligations, funds growth, and returns capital to shareholders. Despite the current interest rate environment, its interest coverage ratio is strong at nine times operating cash flows, and its projected dividend payout ratio remains low at 30%. Since it is operating in a duopolistic sector alongside UPS, FedEx benefits from a strong competitive position and significant economies of scale. Its extensive network has cemented its reputation as a reliable global transportation leader. Finally, the pandemic underscored the essential nature of its services, reinforcing confidence in its ability to maintain dividends even under severe conditions.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

FedEx is currently navigating a period of cautious consumer spending and volatile energy costs. However, by aggressively consolidating its independent networks into a unified 'One FedEx' system and focusing on high-margin logistics, FedEx is successfully protecting its margins. Still, we see annualized returns of 3.3% through 2031, as valuation headwinds could offset returns from the dividend and projected growth. FedEx earns a hold rating only due to its progressive dividend.
