Overview & Current Events

Lindsay Corporation provides water management and road infrastructure services in the United States and internationally. The business's irrigation segment provides irrigation solutions for farmers and contributed 84% of sales in fiscal year 2025, the infrastructure segment helps with road and bridge repairs and contributed the other 16%. The conflict in Ukraine has caused a disruption in agricultural activity in that region, leading farmers to plant more intensively in North America. Both irrigation and infrastructure benefit from government support payments. The Infrastructure Investments and Jobs Act (IIJA) marked the largest federal investment into infrastructure projects in more than a decade and has boosted Lindsay's infrastructure business. The company delivered record results in its recently concluded fiscal year 2025, though 2026 looks like it will be a significantly down year by comparison.

On April 2nd, 2026, Lindsay reported its Q2 2026 results for the period ending February 28th, 2026. The business saw diluted earnings-per-share of $1.15, which slumped from the $2.44 reported the same quarter of last year. This figure missed expectations by 54 cents. Meanwhile, revenues plunged 16% year-over-year to $158 million. Lindsay had reported robust growth in much of FY'25, but that appears to have been largely driven by trade policy, namely that clients were stocking up on equipment before tariffs went into effect.

Now that has gone into reverse. Lindsay reported a stunning 58% drop in infrastructure revenues in Q2 in part because a large contract from the prior year didn't recur. Irrigation revenues were down by 5% year-over-year; the company attributed this to weak farmer sentiment and higher interest rates in some markets such as Brazil. Revenues were down across both the North American and International markets.

There was no silver lining to be found in Lindsay's Q2 results. Sales were weak across all markets and segments and profit margins also slipped. The company remains concerned about the North American market for the remainder of the year, though it is hopeful that Brazil and Middle East/North Africa will return to growth in coming quarters. That said, the onset of the war in Iran could cast that into doubt as well. We have significantly reduced our 2026 EPS estimate.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

Year	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2026	2031

Shares	11	11	11	11	11	11	11	11	11	11	11	11

Over the last decade, Lindsay has seen earnings-per-share grow at an average annualized rate of 11.1%. While agriculture is a cyclical business, the company has shown fairly steady earnings growth over the past decade. The firm's infrastructure business also helps even out fluctuations. 2025 was a strong year for Lindsay, but the agriculture market appears to be weakening this year. Despite a near-term dip in earnings going forward, we expect 7% annualized growth over the longer term.

Over both the past five and ten years, Lindsay has grown its dividend at around a 3% annualized rate. The company announced its latest dividend increase on June 27th, 2025, giving investors a 2.8% increase. This boosted the quarterly dividend from 36 cents to 37 cents per share.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	Now	2031
Avg. P/E	26.9	37.6	31.3	62.1	26.7	37.1	24.5	22.0	20.3	18.9	18.7	23.0
Avg. Yld.	1.6%	1.4%	1.3%	1.4%	1.3%	0.9%	0.8%	1.0%	1.1%	1.1%	1.4%	1.0%

Over the last decade, Lindsay has averaged a P/E ratio of 30.7, and over the past five years, the stock has averaged a P/E ratio of 24.6. We expect the P/E to settle around 23 in the long run. The dividend yield has ticked up to 1.4% recently, which is significantly higher than the median over the past five years.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2026	2031
Payout	43%	54%	41%	86%	35%	34%	23%	21%	23%	22%	27%	23%

Lindsay has averaged a payout ratio of 38% over the past 10 years. It is below that today. We project that the dividend will be safe since the low payout ratio signifies that the dividend is well-covered from earnings.

Even though the business is in a cyclical industry, Lindsay has a very safe balance sheet, with minimal net debt. In addition, the company has remained profitable even during down periods for crop prices which speaks to the firm's stability. Lindsay has historically benefited from geographic diversification, but in recent years, it has seen multiple international markets including Ukraine, Russia, and Brazil run into sharp headwinds.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Lindsay Corporation offers investors an opportunity to own a business that will indirectly benefit from the rising tides of stronger ag prices and potential government spending on infrastructure. Lindsay had enjoyed a strong uptick in 2025 potentially tied to tariff policy, but that appears to have disappeared now. Despite a projected drop in 2026 earnings, we still see a path to 12.5% total annualized returns going forward. Shares earn a hold rating today.
