Overview & Current Events

Banco Bradesco offers various banking products and financial services to individuals, corporations, and businesses in Brazil and internationally. The company's two main segments are banking and insurance, including checking and savings accounts, demand deposits, and time deposits, as well as accident and property insurance products, and investment products. The company generated almost $49 billion in total interest income last year and is headquartered in Osasco, Brazil. All financials have been converted to USD unless otherwise specified.

On May 6th, 2026, Banco Bradesco released its first-quarter results for the period ending March 31st, 2026. For the quarter, net interest income reached approximately $3.81 billion, a 16.4% increase compared to 1Q25. This growth was largely driven by an 8.4% expansion of the expanded loan portfolio, which totaled roughly $208.8 billion at quarter-end. Management noted that performance was bolstered by a 16.3% rise in client NII, while market NII also improved despite a challenging macroeconomic backdrop

Insurance operations maintained strong momentum, with income from insurance, pension plans and capitalization bonds reaching approximately $1.21 billion, up 20.4% year over year. The insurance group posted net income of $525 million, reflecting a controlled claims ratio and a high ROAE of 21.6%. These results were primarily attributed to consistent commercial traction, improved claims performance, higher financial income, and the initial consolidation of healthcare assets under Bradsaúde.

Recurring net income climbed to $1.29 billion, up 16.1% over the prior-year quarter. This growth was supported by a 6.2% rise in fee and commission income and continued broadly controlled credit quality; the 90-day delinquency ratio ended the quarter at 4.2%. EPS was about $0.10. For FY2026, we expect EPS of $0.50.

Banco Bradesco's EPS has been improving gradually in constant currency but is shown as flat or reduced over the years when converted into USD due to BRL/USD depreciation. At the end of 1Q26, the company reported that its expanded loan portfolio reached $208.8 billion, up 0.1% sequentially and 8.4% year-over-year. Further, the company's client base in its Ágora digital investment brokerage app remained at about 1.4 million, up 14% over the last 12 months, with about $27.2 billion at the quarter-end exchange rate. While we would typically price in positive growth in the company's EPS results, especially given the continued momentum in its brokerage platform and the recovery in ROE, such growth could once again be offset by FX fluctuations.

Banco Bradesco pays a rare monthly dividend of about $0.0035 per share. However, most of its payout comes from supplemental Interest on Equity (JCP), making the annual yield harder to predict. We estimate a $0.26 total dividend for 2026, supported by improving Net Interest Income (NII) and progress in its 2024–2028 Strategic Plan, which should drive payout recovery as ROE returns toward historical levels. Note that the company had consecutively grown its dividend annually from 2012 to 2019, but again, FX changes have distorted that amount.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	Now	2031
Avg. P/E	10.8	12.1	13.5	13.2	11.8	10.9	9.2	10.6	10.7	6.4	7.5	7.5
Avg. Yld.	3.7%	4.5%	3.9%	7.8%	3.5%	3.2%	3.8%	6.2%	4.3%	7.8%	6.9%	6.9%

Banco Bradesco's historical P/E has been quite stable over the year, hovering in the mid-teens. On the one hand, the company's modest growth and monthly payouts, which provide rather predictable returns, could suggest a valuation appreciation potential. The current, elevated interest rates should boost its interest income and insurance results as well. On the other hand, due to the company being based outside of the U.S. (lack of shareholder-interest prioritization, different reporting standards, etc.,) and the prospect of a weakening BRL rightfully drags the valuation lower. Thus, we consider the stock fairly valued today at around 7.5x projected EPS.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2026	2031
Payout	76%	52%	47%	94%	49%	50%	29%	67%	37%	50%	52%	52%

While Banco Bradesco's dividend is not consistent and will continue to vary based on the company's underlying results and FX changes, a base level ($0.0033/month) should be considered quite safe, being well-covered by the company's cash from operations. The company continued to pay its base monthly rate even under the Great Financial Crisis, despite its financials suffering along with the rest of its sector.

The company's Basel ratio stood at 14.5% on a pro forma basis at the end of 1Q26, while its Common Equity Tier 1 ratio was 12.7%, reflecting a solid capital structure that remains comfortably above regulatory requirements. Liquidity coverage also remained strong, with the LCR at 161.6%, providing an ample buffer to ensure sufficient available funds if needed.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Banco Bradesco S.A. is a well-managed financial services company. In its original Sao Paulo listing, shares have delivered investors positive returns over the years when valued in constant currency. Still, for American investors, the company's underlying growth has been wiped out by the continuous depreciation of BRL/USD. While we believe the stock is fairly valued today, we still find BBD's lack of continued dividend growth and overall consistency underwhelming. Thus, we rate the stock as a sell.
