Overview & Current Events

Amcor plc is one of the world's most prominent designers and manufacturers of packaging for food, pharmaceutical, medical, and other consumer products. The company emphasizes making responsible packaging that is lightweight, recyclable, and reusable. Today, the Amcor plc, which trades on the NYSE, was formed in June 2019 with the merger between two packaging companies, U.S.-based Bemis Co. Inc. and Australia-based Amcor Ltd. Amcor plc's current headquarters is in Bristol, U.K. Amcor currently trades with a market capitalization of $17.4 billion.

Amcor reported its third quarter results for Fiscal Year 2026 on May 6th, 2026. The company's fiscal year ends in June. The company reported strong third-quarter fiscal 2026 results, primarily driven by its acquisition of Berry Global. Revenue increased 77% year over year to $5.9 billion, while adjusted EBITDA rose 87% to $892 million and adjusted EBIT increased 79% to $687 million. Adjusted earnings per share (EPS) reached $0.96, exceeding analyst expectations. Management highlighted successful integration efforts, with acquisition-related synergies contributing significantly to profitability during the quarter.

Despite the substantial increase in reported revenue, underlying business conditions remained somewhat challenging. Excluding the impact of the Berry acquisition, organic sales declined slightly due to weaker customer demand and lower volumes in certain markets. The company also reported negative free cash flow of $39 million, largely due to integration, restructuring, and transaction costs associated with the acquisition. Net debt increased to approximately $14.3 billion as a result of financing the merger.

Looking ahead, management reaffirmed its fiscal 2026 outlook and expects adjusted EPS between $3.98 and $4.03, representing approximately 12% growth at the midpoint of guidance. The company also projects free cash flow of $1.5 billion to $1.6 billion and expects total pre-tax synergy benefits from the Berry acquisition to reach approximately $270 million. While macroeconomic and geopolitical uncertainties remain, management believes Amcor is well-positioned to drive future earnings growth through its expanded scale, operational efficiencies, and ongoing integration efforts.

Amcor plc is a new entity, lacking long-term growth data. However, by examining Bemis Co. Inc. and Amcor Ltd's histories, we can gain insights. Bemis, a stable dividend stock, saw annual yields over 3% in its last five years as a public company. Specializing in flexible packaging for food and pharmaceuticals, Bemis' efficient restructuring in 2017 drove net income from $94 million to $225.7 million between 2017 and 2018. While past performance isn't predictive, Amcor's potential growth is indicated, particularly in Latin America's strong packaging demand. Projections of 7% annual growth over the next five years suggest an estimated FY2031 share value of $5.60.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2026	2031
Avg. P/E	---	---	---	17.4	16.9	15.5	15.5	13.4	13.4	11.1	9.7	15.0
Avg. Yld.	---	---	---	4.6%	4.1%	3.8%	4.9%	5.1%	5.5%	6.0%	6.7%	3.8%

Amcor is currently undervalued. The current dividend yield is attractive compared to the broader market, but the payout ratio is high. Again, since we do not have historical data to value Amcor reasonably, we will have to wait a few more years to reevaluate Amcor's performance and see if it will continue to grow its dividend. Thus, we have a forward dividend growth of only 4%.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2026	2031
Payout	---	---	---	37%	73%	63%	59%	66%	71%	71%	65%	57%

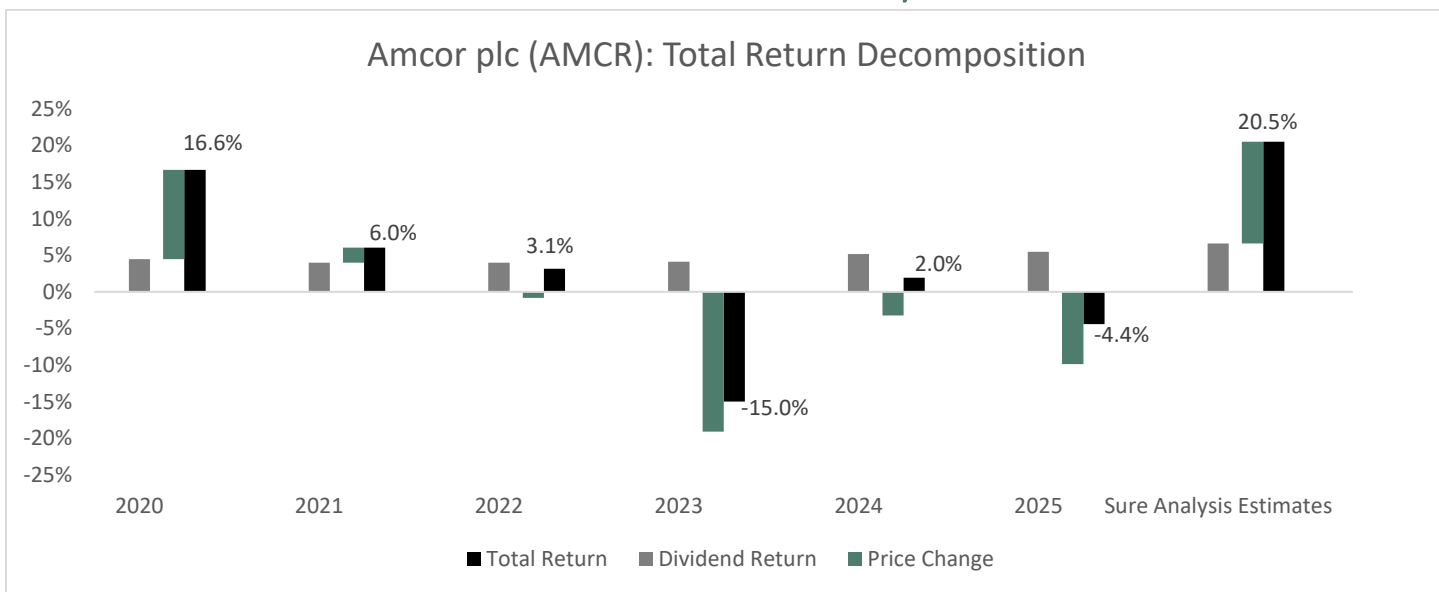

Amcor Plc was created from two sturdy dividend payers, so we see no reason why that trend should not continue. Although Amcor's headquarters are in Great Britain, its largest markets are in the Americas. That means Amcor should be relatively safe from potential future declines to the pound (or to the Australian dollar, for that matter).

Amcor's emphasis on recyclable and reusable products should appeal to more conscious end-users, while the merger with Bemis brings it huge prospects in developing markets. Plus, with the merger into one gigantic manufacturing entity, Amcor has increased its ability to negotiate better costs from its suppliers. This should make Amcor an unstoppable force in the packaging industry. The company's balance sheet looks to be stable with a created rating of BBB. The company has a current debt-to-equity ratio of 1.4x.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

There is plenty to like with Amcor's prospects. The company is based on two strong manufacturing companies, each with growth potential, especially in developing markets. The company looks well-positioned going forward; we estimate a 20.5% annual return for the next five years at the current price. Thus, we rate Amcor a Buy.
