Overview & Current Events

Donaldson has been creating filtration solutions for a wide array of applications since 1915. Its sales consist of filters in various engine and industrial applications as core categories, but continuous innovation and acquisitions have expanded the portfolio. The company is expected to produce about $3.9 billion in revenue this year and trades with a current market capitalization of $9.7 billion.

Donaldson posted third quarter earnings on June 2nd, 2026, and results were better than expected on both the top and bottom line. Adjusted earnings-per-share came to $1.06, which was a penny ahead of estimates. Revenue was up 6% year-on-year to $995 million, beating estimates by $21.5 million.

Gross margin was 34.4% of revenue, which was down 10 basis points year-over-year. The management team noted pricing, volume, and mix benefits were more than offset by headwinds from short-term operating inefficiencies in its Industrial segment. Operating margin was 16.6% of revenue, which is an all-time high. The management team noted this quarter is expected to be the lowest in terms of margins, with a sustained recovery into fiscal 2027.

The company noted it closed the acquisition of Facet Filtration, noting 70% of its revenue is driven by recurring regulated replacement parts with very strong margins.

We are now at $3.95 in adjusted earnings-per-share for this year with one quarter remaining, and continue to see Donaldson as a strong performer.

Donaldson's earnings growth has been inconsistent in the past decade as it is very much beholden to economic conditions around the world. Its customer base is diverse and deep, but growth seems to come in bunches, not in a steady fashion. Looking forward, we are forecasting robust 9% earnings-per-share growth annually. We remain somewhat cautious on the company's ability to grow revenue, as well as expand its margins despite recent pricing increases. However, management is bullish, seeing improvement on the horizon in the near term, and recent results have been supportive of higher revenue and better margins.

The company can grow through a variety of methods. First, sales increases ought to continue from organic growth, pricing increases, and acquisitions, which should amount to mid-single-digit or better growth. We see margin improvement activities as key to the company producing meaningfully higher earnings in the coming years, as well as a rebound in revenue producing leverage on SG&A costs.

Lastly, Donaldson is buying back stock each year. We forecast moderate dividend growth, but Donaldson is not a high-income stock, choosing instead to use its excess cash for acquisitions and share repurchases. Share repurchases are relatively small in any particular year, but over time, add up to meaningful gains for shareholders. With the new authorization, we expect share repurchases to increase.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	Now	2031
Avg. P/E	21.9	24.9	23.9	24.7	24.2	24.6	18.0	20.7	21.9	19.6	21.3	21.0
Avg. Yld.	2.2%	1.7%	1.6%	1.5%	1.7%	1.5%	1.8%	1.5%	1.4%	1.6%	1.5%	1.4%

Donaldson’s price-to-earnings multiple has been remarkably steady in the past decade. However, given where shares are today, we are forecasting a fractional headwind to total returns as shares are above our estimate of fair value. Shares go for 21.3 times earnings today, up on our fair value estimate of 21 times.

We are forecasting the yield to stay flat in the years to come as the payout and valuation increases. This is not a stock one buys for the current yield, as the company’s stated strategy requires the use of excess cash for acquisitions and buybacks.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2026	2031
Payout	48%	41%	38%	38%	41%	37%	33%	32%	30%	31%	32%	30%

Donaldson’s payout ratio remains around 32% of earnings and we expect that is where it will stay for the foreseeable future. As mentioned, Donaldson prefers to use most of its excess cash for acquisitions and a small amount of share repurchases, but it does raise the dividend regularly, as we note a 31-year streak of dividend increases.

Donaldson’s recession performance is somewhat of an issue, as you’d expect for an industrial stock, and earnings will likely fall significantly during the next downturn. It does enjoy the competitive advantage of more than 100 years of experience in its field, as well as a strong history of innovation and a sizable installed customer base.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Donaldson’s stock price is fairly valued after good Q3 results. We are forecasting total annual returns of 10%, consisting of the current 1.5% yield, a fractional impact from the valuation, and 9% earnings growth. The stock still offers investors growth potential, but the yield is somewhat low for income investors. We’re reiterating our hold rating after Q3 results.
